

Vol. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, OCTOBER, 1887.

No. 2.

TEACHING BUSINESS WRITING.

WERE we to state that, in our honest opinion, the average professional penman is incapable of successfully imparting to a pupil a strong, sensible and durable business hand-writing, we should, doubtless incur the ill-will of many. But we are almost persuaded that in so doing we should but echo that which every day makes clearer and more unmistakable to the commercial community. Not long since, a man of affairs remarked to me that the time he had spent in learning to write was simply time lost! He explained that it was not because writing was of no use to him, but that he found the style which he so laboriously acquired under the tuition of a writing master of no practical utility. When subjected to the test of use in actual business, the old story of a rapid deterioration to a mere scrawl was the natural result. With such an astounding accumulation of evidence against the methods of teaching business writing which are so largely in vogue among the members of our fraternity, it becomes a matter of pressing importance that we enter upon an honest investigation, and that we endeavor to discover the defects in our theories, though through that discovery we may be forced to abandon some favorite belief, or to discard some long practiced teaching habit.

There is no one thing which so effectually serves to create, in the minds of business men, a dislike for the business college or which aids in robbing those institutions of their rightful sphere in the business world, as the actual failure of their writing teachers to afford proper training in this branch. It sounds very agreeable and soothing to our sensitive auricular appendages, to occupy space in our journals in congratulating one another on the wonderful progress we are making; of the rapid strides we are taking in the direction of advance theories in teaching; but while we are, indiscreetly, resting in a state of perfect tranquillity over the grand results that are being achieved, it does not stifle the cry for a reform which the outside world is uttering, nor satisfy the demands which practical people are making upon our institutions for instruction in writing which shall produce just the results needed when the school is exchanged for the counting room. Other subjects of the curriculum are taught in a manner which more nearly conforms to the usages and practices of the world; but writing is treated as though in its acquisition the pupil must rear a delicately beautiful and artistic structure; as though the only uses to which it is expected that it shall be devoted are the subserving of and ministering to the art taste.

The time must come when the style of writing and the kind of movements taught in the business college and those used in the transaction of actual business shall be identical—the latter only a more complete development of the former. Until this is accomplished, we have an important work to do, which is educational sacrilege to ignore or neglect. The teacher must become the possessor of a rapid and legible business hand, as well as of the æsthetic and ornate; he must mingle with and become accustomed to the practices of business men, and familiar with the usages of business establishments. Let him consult the tastes of book-keepers, office clerks, telegraph operators and post-office employéas to what they regard as the most practical forms and the most available movements in business writing.

We must try to bring about a reconciliation between the business college and the business community, and an advance step from a practical standpoint, than is great proficiency in the higher branches of the art.

TORN FROM A PRIVATE LETTER.

EDITORIAL RETREAT—"HERALD" HEAD-QUARTERS, CLEVELAND—LATE IN SEPTEMBER.

MY ESTEEMED PALMER.—The stolid and haughty personage who flings my mail in at the door in a savage manner twice each day, brought me, this morning, the last issue of the Western Penman. For three and a half years, the modest wrapper which encloses this widely admired little magazine, has followed and overtaken me—although during that time I have wandered among some of the waste places of our side of the globe. Before your first number was materialized, if you will remember, I hastened to contract for twelve of its visits, and since those fargone days, it has never quite deserted me. Through its columns I have poured the ripest of my mental fruits—the best of my pub-have the honor of presiding. I am thankful for your advice—not so much for its value, however, as for the spirit which, I like to hope, prompted it. I am somewhat surprised that you should adopt the decayed form of criticism which invariably refers to the inexperience of the subject, if, perchance, the frosts have not congealed his youthful spirits. Why, my dear Palmer, we are all inexperienced. Can any of us assume to have passed so many of life's dark places, and to have so thoroughly inculcated the lessons that are thus afforded, that we can avoid stumbling? Yes, I do not blush to acknowledge that I am young—almost a boy, in fact. Yet I have encountered a sufficient number of the rough places in the pathway of years to give to me not an inconsiderable portion of that acquired insight which we are in the habit of calling practical experience.

* * * * *

In my new paper I shall not recognize the fact, if it be a fact, that what you are pleased to term "long-winded articles" are an essential ingredient in a venture which claims literary merit. In my estimation, the highest attainable excellence in composition is the ability to embody the most real, forcible and INTENSIFIED MEANING, in the least possible entangling of word foliage. In our attempts to be brief we should always endeavor to avoid abruptness and inelegance, angularity and harshness. Even when presenting matter of the most sternly practical nature, we can render our ideas far more forcible and pleasing by lending to our style of word pictures that wave-like grace and restful freshness of expression which characterize the productions of proficient journalists. I am unable to disconnect the relations which, in my opinion, a periodical should sustain to journalism, and which journalism sustains toward literature. I look upon them as a sort of trinity. The idea of a publication is always closely allied with the idea of journalism. The presenting of designs in art must be made supplementary to the journalistic or literary matter, or the periodical loses that element which gives it character.

You refer to the fact that those in search of literature in its higher forms never seek it among the lists of penmen's papers. If they had any assurance of finding it, they would surely not hesitate to do so. I often fall to wondering why this is so, and I can come to no other conclusion than that the penmanship editors have educated the people wrongly. The reading public are not prejudiced in favor of any class of is made in that line when we recognize the fact, that, in all probability, some of the complaints against our system are, in part, just ones. It is rather inconsistent for a teacher in a business college to assume the responsibility of training a young man for some position in the world of commerce which he, himself, would be utterly incapable of filling. How many of the instructors in our commercial schools could step into a business office and discharge, in a satisfactory manner, the duties of a practical book-keeper or correspondent? Not many, I am convinced.

This specimen represents the plain writing of PROF. W. H. PATRICK, Baltimore, Md. The original, which was much larger than the cut, was an elegant piece of writing, and was prepared especially for the HERALD. The engraving is far inferior to the copy.

It is a too common habit with presidents of this class of schools to regard the ability of a penman to write an artistic style as a sufficient pass port in admitting him to his faculty as a writing teacher. While we would be far from uttering a word to the detriment of the artistic and ornamental pen-art, we do candidly believe that in a business college teacher, the ability to write a strong, plain hand and to impart it to pupils, is of far greater importance, lished articles—however weak and flimsy, full of substanceless and hollow argument they may have been adjudged by yourself and readers. Because of the prominent place I have always assigned to your lively publication in my collection of periodical treasures, I trust that you will not think strangely of me for manifesting a vital and earnest interest in the somewhat pronounced editorial which appeared in the current number, and which carelessly picks up myself and my new journalistic enterprise, and tosses us about, over the waves of merciless and destructive criticism, in a perfectly cool and matter-of-fact style.

I cannot help believing that your review, coming, as it did, before you examined a copy of the HERALD, was more the result of a misunderstanding of my intentions in the literary line, than of a disposition on your part to depreciate my venture, simply because it does not propose to adopt all the features of nor imitate in every detail, the paper over which you magazines to such a degree that they will not search for merit outside of the recognized channels. A display of true genius cannot be hidden. It will be discovered, and it makes little difference to the cultured as to where the blaze bursts forth.

No, my brother editor, I do not expect

At least three desires impelled me to enter this work, and you will, doubtless, comprehend me more fully when you are made aware of their nature. The all-important one, from which springs the trio, consists of a strange and intense love for the profession of penmanship and the the home circle, and there inspire the youth to higher aims, and better effort, in a chirographic sense. In view of the fact that writing is so sorrowfully neglected, parents could be easily persuaded to place a penman's paper in the hands of their boys and girls, could they feel for something more refreshing and invigorating in our journalistic world. In a penman's paper they expect to find material for an occasional hour of pleasant and helpful reading.

There are a great many penmen who sadly need the higher style of literature, and they will never procure it unless it gratifying results in my work for long years yet. My ideal PEN-ART HERALD is so far superior to the present, actual one, that I should not feel that an injustice had been done me were the members of our profession to refuse me even a smattering of material support.

PHOTO-ENGRAVED FROM THE PEN-WORK OF PROF. H. W. KIRBE, THE NOTED PEN-ARTIST OF UTICA, N. Y.

work of teaching. I should count no sacrifice too great were the end to be attained the advancement of our work. I believe that in no way can we more surely move forward than by enlisting the power and influence of the press in our behalf. We must secure admission into safe in doing so. Unfortunately, the majority of our papers are addicted to the use of slang phrases, and it is useless to deny the fact that the general reading matter is far from elevating, inspiring or purifying in its general tone.

There is a class of teachers who long can be obtained in connection with the journals of their profession.

From this tedious recital of my plans and expectations as connected with my HERALD, I trust that you will conclude that it deserves to live. With fraternal greetings, I remain the same visionary, inexperienced SHOWALTER.

A SUCCESSFUL WRITING
TEACHER.

When a man does some worthy thing in a manner that indicates genius; when one, by utilizing his every power, forces himself to the front; when his accomplishments are brought into such bold relief that people are forced to notice them—then, it is perfectly natural that those who are striving to attain to a like eminence should desire to know something definite in regard to the circumstances under which he has labored—in order that the causes of his success may be discovered. The study of biography is never an unpleasant or irksome one. It is a sort of delightful pastime to glance over the events and occurrences of another's life; especially is this so if his pathway has been leading to the same centre towards which our own tends.

One of our own brothers, who is a fitting representative of the "new south"—Prof. H. J. Williamson, of Richmond, Va., has a record of which he may appropriately boast. His earliest glimpses of the world were obtained among the melancholy Alleghenies of Virginia, in 1859.

He arrived upon our planet in rather a critical period, as the chronologist will recall. In justice to our friend we must say, that his better instincts induced him to remain neutral during the progress of the rebellion; the same can be said of a great many of our now prominent professionals. This aversion to informal and careless fencing, which he silently manifested at so early an age, has found its more practical development in his career since that time, as he has shown an unmistakable preference for the pen—having, mastered, himself, and drilled numerous scattered armies in penmanistic tactics.

The stream of events which are looked upon as essentials of a biography may be recited as follows from his life calendar:

His father's fortune was largely sacrificed in the civil conflict which occurred during the morning twilight of his years. Inheriting an energy which is the offspring of that somber period of our history, he longed to excel in everything attempted, and was capable of performing the farm work of a man while merely a boy in strength and age. Until twelve years of age he worked upon his father's place, personifying the tanned, barefoot boy which Whittier dreams into poetical life. The only essential difference in the boy of the poem and the brightly youngster of whom we are compiling remarks, consisted in that the latter sometimes had his back, as well as his cheek, tanned. We are not justified, by the data on our table, in stringing this irrelevant comment on the rosary of Mr. Williamson's biography; but our own early experience in the same section of country suggests the statement. At this time his father sustained heavy losses by fire, and, as his was a nature craving independence, he procured employment in a store, working upon a very small salary for five years. During this period a few copies of the old "Western Penman" came into his possession. The usual results resulted resultantly. The fires were kindled! He was wild with his newly found love for beautiful penmanship, and vowed that he would one day possess the ability to execute those graceful forms which had burned themselves into his mind.

In order to carry out his resolve he squared his laundry bills, purchased a box of new paper collars, and found his way to Washington, taking a course in plain writing of Prof. H. C. Spencer.

Returning to his loved Virginia, he organized a class in penmanship, at Wood Lawn, numbering over seventy-five pupils. His success as an itinerant was immediately established. He taught constantly for some time, traveling over nearly every southern built up an immense card business among his former pupils.

Entering the teaching field again, he located at Richmond. Beginning with a small class, his numbers have constantly increased until he has enrolled, during the past two years, over fifteen hundred pupils! He has spent large sums in furnishing his school with every convenience Engraved from a design executed by J. P. MCKEEN, a skilled amateur penman, who resides at Jacob's Creek, Pa. He was lately a pupil of Prof. McKee Oerlin, O.

state, instructing classes in Universities, Colleges, Private Schools, Cities and towns. In '83; he accepted a position in the U. S. Custom-House at Newport News, Va., at a salary of $3.00 per day. This situation he held with great success until the office was discontinued. At the same time he kept up his teaching at odd hours, and and facility which refined taste could suggest; and in his classes are found young men and ladies from many of the best families of that proud southern city.

Having secured more commodious quarters and trained assistance, he has merged his school into a regularly equipped Business College. It would be preposterous to suppose that anything short of an ideal success will attend this venture.

As a teacher, the Professor is a power. His whole soul is in the work, and his genial manner and infectious enthusiasm gain for him at once the entire confidence and esteem of his pupils.

As a man, he is possessed of such a catalogue of liberal traits as are rarely combined in an individual. We know him to be broad-hearted and noble; there is not a trace of selfish narrowness in his nature.

He is a spicy and interesting literary writer, as is evidenced by his able and bright editorial work on that model specimen of a live penman's paper, "The Writing Teacher."

He is single. That he may succeed in getting married and in all of his future endeavors in even a greater degree than that which has followed him in the past, is earnestly hoped by the editor of the PEN ART HERALD.

A VARIETY OF THINGS CHIRO-GRAPHIC.

One of the pleasing and distinguishing features of "A SERIES OF LESSONS IN PLAIN WRITING," to the advertisement of which we would call especial attention, is the surprisingly low figure at which the work is sold. We can honestly assure our younger readers that as a guide to successful self-teaching, it is well worth five times the amount asked for it. In thus placing a standard and unexcelled work within the reach of everyone, the publishers and authors, Professors Putnam and Kinsley, have shown an aggressive spirit which is, in the highest sense, commendable. They rely on the merits of the work for returns, and if this generation has not grown entirely unappreciative, we feel sure that the immense outlays of money and labor which these gentlemen have made in order to perfect and bring before the public their "Lessons," will yield them, ultimately, ample reward.

Packard's Commercial Arithmetic, an advertisement of which may be found in this issue, is the latit, and we feel no hesitation in saying that it is the best work of its kind now in the catalogue of treatises upon practical computation. The author is not quite a stranger to Business College people, so we deem it unnecessary to enter upon a recital of his qualifications for producing just the sort of an arithmetic which the people of to-day demand. It contains lucid presentations of all the late improvements in short methods, and to all who have any use for an arithmetic—which, of course, will include a number of persons—this book will prove a thing of value and a text-book forever. N. B.—We have never examined a copy of the above work.

The September number of the popular Western Penman, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is fully up to the high artistic standard for which it is noted. It contains a lengthy review of our paper, written before the editor had seen a copy. Feeling that, in a measure, it was unjust, we comment upon it in this issue. Let it be understood, however, that the two papers are on perfectly friendly terms.

The Pen-Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature

Subscription price, Seventy-five cents per year. Single numbers, Ten cents each.

Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 inch, 1 month,	$2	3 months,	$5	1 year,	$12
3 " " " "	"	"	"	"	"
1/2 col. " " "	10	"	"	"	25
1 " " " "	20	"	"	"	50
1 " " " "	12	3 " " "	30	1 " " "	100

CLUB RATES

5 to 10, Sixty cents each.
10 to 25, Sixty cents each.
25 to 50, Rates made known on application.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every district or other kind of live school in the land, to act as our representative, and to solicit subscriptions and advertisements for the Herald. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 56a FEARL STREET.

Cleveland, Ohio. W. D. SHOWALTER,
Editor and Publisher

Entered at the Post Office, at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class mail matter.

SCRAPS OF EDITORIAL THOUGHT.

In our autumn-time of the ages, individuals have arrived at that state of incredulity which demands a reason for everything. A more critical and a more questioning spirit has taken possession of the masses. A more universal understanding of the application of scientific truths to the common matters of life has resulted in effective death-blows to superstition. Under the burning light of scientific research, the veiled mysteries of magicians and soothsayers are yielding their secrets. Mankind are coming to the belief that all incomprehensible phenomena are wrought through a devious manipulation of material causes. All of the awe-inspiring performances of jugglers, the hidden workings of supposed fairies, and the improbable traditions that have followed the human race down the stream of generations, are being sifted and destroyed in the caldron of science. The possession of a marvelous degree of skill in any line of art is no longer regarded as an unexplainable and darkly mysterious attainment. The trained and cultured artist penman is now looked upon as a material result of certain material causes.

A careful compliance with the fixed conditions which science imposes is the only secret of skill in execution. The ability to assist others in exercising the same causes, in an intelligent manner, is the chief secret of successful teaching.

Professor Henry C. Spencer, Principal of the Washington Business College, has lately given the profession another proof of his progressiveness by obtaining an expression of the opinions of one hundred of the leading teachers of penmanship, regarding the best forms of small and capital letters, figures and characters, judged from a practical standpoint—the forms selected from a sheet containing a great variety of the styles in common use, prepared by himself.

The results of this advance step cannot fail to be of very great value to those who are seeking more light. The professionals who are in favor of a reform in styles of letters, by this means have an opportunity to give their ideas a full and free expression. It is an essentially American notion, from the fact that it constitutes a sort of ballot box, through which the teachers may have a chance to indicate their preferences, so far as the matter of forms of letters is concerned. Although we are not warranted in saying it, we suppose that the Professor intends that the results of this investigation shall have an influence in the future revisions and modifications of the "SPENCERIAN," and should such be the case, he will do more to initiate that system into public and professional favor than has ever yet been done.

The teacher, on account of mingling so little in the hurry and bustle of the outside world, is too apt to relax into a state of inertness, and to lose that zest and celerity which characterize the successful men in the various lines of commercial activity. The influences of his life are not of his own, and by telling of it to a brother, he not only comes to a clearer understanding of it himself, but assists another in attaining to a more gratifying plane of success as an instructor.

AN EARNST TALK WITH THE BOYS.

Often, when attempting to express, in an intelligent style, our opinions and conclusions upon a subject which it is difficult to fathom, or when linking our ideas together for the inspection and criticism of those of our brothers, in the profession, who are older and in every particular our superiors, we experience that sort of timidity which comes to a consciousness of delving in matters beyond our full and complete comprehension. After some of our efforts to produce creditable articles on the subjects which have a bearing on the work of the writing teacher, we can not dismiss the thought that in all probability we have rendered ourself ridiculous through trying to subdue and naturalize thoughts that have eluded the author's grasp through all time.

The embryo scribe should sacrifice all of his opportunities for mental development on the common altar of an insatiable art craze. The pursuit of other studies is apt to become distasteful. Nothing seems to possess attractions but penmanship. And while the artistic instinct, in spite of the attempts of practical minded parents to suppress it, is growing and expanding, the qualities which lend to the character that charm which is imparted only through the full development of the intellectual attributes, are perverted and rendered inactive from utter neglect and disregard of those conditions upon which their enlargement depends.

Selfishly devoting all effort and strength to the pursuit of fame and perfection in his specialty, he drifts along in the swiftly moving current of years, seemingly unconscious of the fact that the rose-bud of life is fast unfolding its colors to the gaze of an ungracious world, and that the deformed and withered leaves of this character-flower must soon undergo that embarrassing exposure which follows in the wake of maturity and physical manhood. And so, when the epoch of existence is passed, in which we are all given time for symmetrical training of the powers which lend to manhood its heauty and to character its divinity, the youth who has methodically suppressed the growth of his mental faculties comes out of the contest with a dwarfed nature, and with a very flimsy tinge of intellectual culture. A detestable quality of egotism, a selfish, narrow nature, a general illiteracy and a lack of a full realization of the meaning of business ethics or morality, compose the natural fruits of this plan of action.

To our younger brethren we wish to say, with ten-fold more emphasis than the printer can

This design was originally executed by PROF. U. McKIE, the far-famed penmanship instructor, who has for years been Principal of The Oberlin College Department of Penmanship. It represents his every day work in flourishing, and was flourished in three and one-fourth minutes.

such a nature as to inspire a quick perception of all possibilities for improving methods or of keeping up with the times. It seems to us that a Business College teacher, especially, should never allow himself to grow listless. There is always some improvement being made in ways of doing business and of keeping accounts, and it is his duty to keep posted on these matters, in order that those under his charge may not be compelled to spend valuable time in mastering things that have been discarded by the business world, and for which they will never have any use outside of the class room.

Those teachers of penmanship who are animated with a desire to excel in their profession should correspond with each other at regular intervals, cultivate a fraternal interest in each other's work, and compare methods and ideas. By this means, those who do not desire to appear in the publicity of print can still have a channel for the expression of opinions, and only mutual benefit can possibly result. There is not a teacher in our ranks who has not some method which is pecu-

But when writing a word of encouragement, advice or friendly greeting to those who are on our own side of life, and who are living on that invisible border land which separates youth and manhood, we lose all unnatural restraint, and allow our thoughts to pour out in unchecked waves. When conversing with the "boys," we feel more certain of the effect which our words may produce. We are then in the presence of kindred sentiments, sympathies and emotions.

We have something to say to the youthful aspirant in this editorial, however, which is of far greater importance than mere idle speculations of this nature. From actual experience we have arrived at a full appreciation and understanding of the difficulties and hindrances which fill the advance pathway of the average boy who attempts to break the crust of habit in his family relations and to attain to eminence in the profession of penmanship. We realize, too, the danger of rash acting, on the part of the youth who is ambitious, when he is restrained and held back by the parental authorities. It is quite natural, under such conditions, that indicate—do not neglect your opportunities for educational development! Your future standing, professionally and socially, depends on your early training. Though you may possess the combined skill of a dozen such masters as Flickinger and Madarasz, as far as execution of beautiful writing is concerned, that cannot alone for a lack of culture. The greatest imaginable perfection in penmanship is of little use to one who is glaringly ignorant. We know that this is hard doctrine for the youth to accept, when his every heart-throb is in unison with the music of chirographic beauty. It has the form of a cold philosophy, and we are apt to accuse its advocate of possessing no art soul. It is pleasant to indulge our day-dreams, and we do not thank the cynical philosopher who rudely awakens us, and who strips our dream structures of their drapery, with its little concern as though it were an ordinary matter. But the light must come in time, and a great deal of vexation and annoyance may be spared us if we take some things for granted. A few years since, we would have scorned such theories; now we accept them with a vengeance.

Boys, let us seek the hidden beauties of a broader development than the art of penmanship will, alone, furnish. We are just ascending the stage of action; let us do our work with such adeptness that the charge of superficial mental attainments may never reach our ears! From this moment, let us, unaided, bid a final farewell to ignorance and narrowness, and begin, in energetic earnestness, the life of a more exalted intelligence!

To Amateurs.

COMPARATIVE CALIBRE.

BY CHANDLER H. PEIRCE, KEOKUK, IOWA.

A reason for everything, a cause for an effect and that effect to be reasoned to its cause, is a reasonably reasonable conclusion in determining a rightful opinion in any scientific investigation. The art of writing is nothing if not scientific.

To deal with it otherwise is to place upon it a lower estimate than should be tolerated by those who profess to champion the cause they love and espouse. All legitimate discussions are to be courted, and if the present opportunity is not seized it will clearly demonstrate a weakness with which our profession is charged. Show your colors and stand by them; if you are deserving, credit will be given you. By comparison are we enabled to know anything. For this reason we should "Herald," every penman's paper from the house top, with all the eclat becoming both artisan and artist, because it is through these wide channels we are enabled to compare, to contrast, to judge, to reason, with the light becoming this day, from a cause to its effect and from the effect back to its cause. I must have a reason, and to attempt to lead others upon a different hypothesis is too presumptuous for comment. To assume that our art is superficial, to lower it one jot or tittle by a proclamation unbecoming a true and worthy knight is a defense, which, if set up, will not stand, because its author must fall by reason of comparative calibre.

It is wisdom not to rise your house until you can build a better. Until your dear little hand can produce something above and beyond the thing under consideration not be guilty of finding fault, of adding suggestions, of attempting to offer a criticism that your youthful mind never cherished.

Compare your calibre and make due allowance in all your estimates. Remember that the advance in civilization has been indeed wonderful in these latter days and don't forget that the dissemination of knowledge in our art through its most potent influence—the press—has placed its most ardent admirers upon the qui vive, watching every issue of our noble representations, and ever ready to grasp every thread of gold each garment contained.

What is your calibre?

What is your strength?

What do you know?

Compare, young man, compare! Your record may be good to the unlettered, but outside the smoke of your own chimney your calibre would be as nothing.

It is a simple admission that everybody cannot be better than everybody else. Some one must be in the lead and it ought to be consolation enough for the youth and beauty of our land to be content to fill the higher positions when their dimensions. Confidence in one's self is all well enough. Earnest, honest effort is all well enough; but results that mean something are not the sport of a day nor are they the result of superficial treatment.

It is all well enough to attribute superiority in every direction to the increase of years and experience, but the same will not come to you without the assistance of science. Superficial treatment and visionary conclusions bring their reward, and if you desire to strengthen the cause and be strengthened by it you must dig down, down, DOWN, or you will be a self-constituted parasite.

Building yourself up by pulling some one else down is not a law of progress, is not a principle that will stand severe tension. Think for yourself and try to understand the thoughts and expressions of others. A willingness to accept a plausible theory is evidence of progress.

THE HERALD CLUB-ROOMS.

E. J. Kneit of Stratford, Ontario, was our first Canadian subscriber. He disposes of ink in a picturesque manner.

J. P. Medsger of Jacob's Creek, Pennsylvania, is a firm friend to educational papers, writes a firm style of penmanship, and is a thoroughly firm sort of a man, generally speaking.

The popular young penman, Professor F. S. Heath, formerly of Epsom, New Hampshire, has united with the Shaw Commercial College, Portland, Maine. He is eminently fitted to discharge the duties of the position, and we have no other expectations than to hear of his bright success.

C. E. Simpson, Saco, Maine, writes a style that many a professional might well covet. His work possesses that peculiar ease and freshness which comes of a trained muscular movement. He informs us that he is taking lessons by mail from Williams, and that for much of his skill he is indebted to that gentleman.

W. L. Todd, Wallingford, Connecticut, has convinced us of the fact that he is a splendid business penman through some neat and rapidly written letters, lately dispatched by him in search of our office.

The most superbly executed specimen of letter writing we have received for many a day comes from Professor H. W. Shaylor, Portland, Maine, who is well known as one of the most skillful pen-artists in America.

Professor D. B. Hanson, Columbus, Ohio, whose card advertisement appears in this issue, is not only a superior penman, but an agreeable and accomplished gentleman. Those of our readers who appreciate original and tastefully designed combinations, and who expect perfectly fair and honest treatment, should not fail to patronize Mr. Hanson.

B. P. Pickens, Mooresville, Tennessee, is teaching classes in penmanship with good success in his native community. He is improving rapidly in all branches of the art, and with his invincible determination is bound to become noted in his adopted calling.

One of our former pupils at the Dubuque, Iowa, Business College, F. C. Dobler, who is now taking a course in penmanship of Professor C. N. Crandle, writes us a neat and attractive letter.

Professor M. B. Moore, Morgan, Kentucky, is now acknowledged by all to stand right up near the head in our class of pen-artists. His letters are always full of literary beauty, and are faultless in a chirographic sense.

We think our readers will agree that the above specimen of flourishing, which we have had engraved directly from the pen and ink copy of PROF. C. F. ZANER, Columbus, Ohio, is one of the most artistic and skillful pieces that a penman's paper has ever published.

present occupants will have served their apprenticeship.

Youthful aspirations and youthful imaginations are in the order of nature and nature's laws, but it requires age and experience to develop judgment, to develop ability, to develop a recognized power that is at all cognizant and perceptible to the naked eye.

If your calibre is not equal to some one else and you can find no reason for it, perhaps some one else, more liberal-minded, could suggest an idea of value. If cause and effect are not prominent in your composition they might be cultivated by a perusal of the various penmen's papers. A dislike for literature is a stamp of ignorance. He who does not read the penmen's papers with a feeling of satisfaction and a willingness to profit by their timely suggestions is a bigot with enough over-weening confidence to diminish his calibre to the smallest possible

Your calibre will be increased by comparison. Avail yourself of all possible means, and if you are what you should be, a firm, steady and healthy growth will be yours throughout all time.

Since our last issue a number of our subscribers and friends have expressed their admiration for the lesson, which was given in that number by the talented teacher, Professor C. N. Crandle of Dixon, Illinois. We shall endeavor to induce the gentleman to continue his articles in future numbers. For many years, Professor Crandle has occupied a prominent place among progressive instructors in pen-art, and we feel complimented by the substantial interest he has taken in our new venture—confident, as we are, that we can do for our constituents no greater service than that of securing a continuance of his valuable articles.

In the School Room.

HOW TO PRACTICE.

BY J. B. DURYEA.

All occupations demand good writers. All business requires good writers. Recently a man stepped into this office and inquired for a boy.

"What kind of a boy do you want?"

"A good, smart boy to work in the store. Kind of an errand boy, and to help the delivery men. And I want a good, easy writer."

"Why should a boy have to write well who is to simply handle boxes?"

"Well I may want him to make out a bill occasionally, and I want a good writer; I am done with these Horace Greeley fellows."

And so it goes. We have calls every week for bookkeepers, clerks, amanuenses and stenographers, and every time, they want good writers.

takes you a week or a month. Write at least six neat, clean pages of every copy before taking up another; no matter if you have a thousand copies or all the movement exercises in existence—you will make more real progress, toward a smooth hand-writing, by five hours good page work on one copy, than by five days work on a hundred different copies.

A man requested his son to hoe a hill of sweet corn that stood in the end of the garden. The boy spent fifteen minutes hacking the top crust of earth, for a foot on each side of the corn, and a number of course did the corn no good. The father, observing this lack of movement on the part of the boy and no prospect of any improvement in movement on the part of the corn, instructed the youngster to dig deeper and loosen all the dirt around the root of the corn. Who could not tell the result?

Miscellaneous practice is hoeing around the top; page writing is hoeing deep.

Pages of one copy produce study; practice on one thing produces skill.

BUSINESS COLLEGE GOSSIP.

The latest sensation in catalogues has been caused by the progressive proprietors of the Rochester Business University issuing an elegantly bound book, setting forth in an unmistakable way the facilities which their Institution possesses in the way of imparting a broad and comprehensive business education. It is perfect in workmanship, and is worthy a place in the library of every teacher.

Principal Peirce of Philadelphia has issued his annual pamphlet containing the proceedings of his last commencement. The addresses it contains are very valuable acquisitions to the educational literature of the day.

The Iowa Business College of Des Moines is said to be full of hard-working students. This school has always had a reputation that is enviable, and is constantly growing in popularity.

Among the many honest and hard-working Business College men whose efforts are being devoted to the advancement of the

Mr. H. P. Behrensmeier of "The Gem City Business College," Quincy, Illinois, who was ably aided in preparing it by that refined and cultured penman, artist, scholar and gentleman, Professor Fielding Schofield. It has been reduced in the engraving about one-half, consequently, the fine effects of the original could not be retained.

TALK ABOUT BOOKS AND OTHER THINGS.

The genial J. M. Hawkes, Manager of the Editorial and Art Departments of the extensive publishing house of A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, favors us with a finely bound set of their National System of Copy-Books. It seems to us that for the purpose they are to serve, an improvement would be hard to suggest. Author, Engraver and Printer have exercised equal taste and care in the preparation of this series. Possessing all the merit which it would seem possible to embody in copy-books, and having wide-awake publishers

Capital Letter Movement Exercises.

2

Written by W. J. Kinsley
Copyright 1887 by Putman & Kinsley

Through the courtesy of Professors PUTMAN AND KINSLEY, we are enabled to present the above reproduction of the second plate in their "Lessons." In connection with Prof. Duryea's excellent article on this page, these copies may be very profitably practiced by learners. Certainly nothing more meritorious in the line of capital letter combinations and movement exercises could be desired.

How to become a good business writer is the leading question with thousands of young men and ladies, who are preparing to enter the great fields of commercial usefulness.

I have, for years, been teaching, with flattering success, what I call "Page Writing." I think that there is no method that will produce as good results in so short a time.

Those practicing from the lessons given in the HERALD can add much to their progress by following these directions:

In learning to write, practice just as you study—to obtain desired results. Write pages of every copy, with the same care that you would use if the County Superintendent was going to criticise them.

Home students, who are learning to write from the Compendiums and Penman's Papers, are always too anxious to change copies every few minutes. I was once a home student and know all the drawbacks; and I know that this miscellaneous practice leads to scribbling.

Work at one thing until you get it, if it

Write pages, boys, neat, clean pages, and with the muscular movement. I mean pure muscular movement. Peirce and I wanted to call it "Arm Rest Movement" last winter, and they wouldn't let us, but you use it—unadulterated—just the same, and never allow yourself to fall into the habit of scribbling.

Subscribe for the HERALD and send for Putman & Kinsley's "Series of Lessons," and write pages and your chances are good for a No. 1 handwriting.

Are you a subscriber to all of the penman's papers? They cost but a trifle, and will be of incalculable benefit to you. They're all good. Don't slight one, but take them all.

Professor S. J. Prigden has joined the staff of Moore's Business University, Atlanta, Georgia. He is one of the leading lights of the south, and is deserving of that eminent degree of success which we hope he will attain.

work in the western states, none are more worthy of mention than Prof. C. Bayless of Dubuque, Iowa. We are glad to learn that his school is enjoying a good degree of prosperity.

The Iowa Commercial College, Davenport, Iowa, is blessed with two animated Principals. It issues a handsome catalogue.

At Little Rock, Ark., is a Business School of no mean repute. Such penmen as Hahn and Harkins have taught within its walls, and it now employs Prof. Charter.

The New Jersey Business College, Newark, N. J., has at its head an accomplished Business Educator, in the person of Prof. C. T. Miller. Its catalogue is one of the most attractive on our table.

OUR HEADING.

We feel confident that every friend of the HERALD will unite with us in pronouncing the new heading a beauty! It is certainly an elegant specimen of pen work, both in design and execution, and reflects great credit upon the young artist, to back them, we do not discover any reason why they should not eventually supersede all trashy productions in this line.

Prof. D. H. Farley, Trenton, N. J., is author of an unique work on penmanship. It is known as his "Model Guide," and is no less than its name would signify. It should be possessed by every student of writing in the country. Containing much sensible instruction, numerous carefully prepared copies, and some very fine pieces of pen-work, it will constitute a perpetual source of inspiration to the struggling student.

"Kibbe's Alphabets" are the most valuable helps in the line of pen-lettering that have ever appeared. The sets are original and the very cream of excellence. Definite and plain instructions are given on the back of each plate. The reputation of the author for producing this line of work renders it superfluous for us to say more in their favor than that they are his greatest efforts.

An excellent article from the popular anonymous writer, known as "Cayce Pen," arrived too late for this issue.

H. W. KIBBE

Gives instruction in all branches of pen-work, either personally or by mail, and makes a variety of specimens of plain and ornamental

Engrossing.

If you want anything in the line of pen-work, or advice on any point of penmanship, or if you will do it for you or guarantee satisfaction, send for Circulars.

Send for Circulars.

Penmen's Supplies

Send post-paid on receipt of price, except ink. Two cent stamps taken.

GILLOT'S 60s, the very finest and best pen made for Writing and Flourishing, 1 gross 25c, 1 gross 85c, 2 gross 1.50. GILLOT'S 30s, for Lettering, Drawing and slow Writing, 1 gross 50c, 1 gross 1.50. GILLOT'S 20s, for the finest Drawing and Lettering, 1 doz 50c, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S Lettering, 1 doz 35c, and a broad point for rapid Lettering, 1 doz 35c, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 15s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 10s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 5s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 2s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/16s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/32s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/64s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/128s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/256s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/512s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1024s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2048s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4096s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8192s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/16384s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/32768s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/65536s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/131072s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/262144s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/524288s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1048576s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2097152s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4194304s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8388608s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/16777216s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/33554432s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/67108864s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/134217728s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/268435456s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/536870912s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1073741824s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2147483648s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4294967296s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8589934592s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/17179869184s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/34359738368s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/68719476736s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/137438953472s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/274877907944s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/549755815888s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1099511631776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2199023263552s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4398046527104s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8796093054208s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/17592186108416s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/35184372216832s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/70368744433664s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/140737488867328s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/281474977734656s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/562949955469312s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1125899911318624s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2251799822637248s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4503599645274496s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9007199290548992s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/18014398581097984s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/36028797162195968s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/72057594324391936s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/144115188648783872s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/288230377297567744s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/576460754595135488s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1152921509190270976s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2305843018380541952s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4611686036761083904s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9223372073522167808s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/18446744147043335616s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/36893488294086671232s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/73786976588173342464s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/147573953176346684928s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/295147906352693369856s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/590295812705386739712s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1180591625410773479424s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2361183250821546958848s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4722366501643093917696s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9444733003286187835392s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/18889466005731715670784s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/37778932011463431341568s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/75557864022926862683136s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/151115728045853725366272s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/302231456091707450732544s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/604462912183414901465088s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1208925824366829802930176s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2417851648733659605860352s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4835703297467319211720704s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9671406594934638423441408s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/19342813189869276446882176s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/38685626379738552893764352s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/77371252759477105787528704s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/154742505518954211575057408s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/309485011037908423150114816s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/618970022075816846300229632s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1237940044151633692600459264s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2475880088303267385200918528s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4951760176606534770401837056s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9903520353213069540803674112s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/19807040706426139081607348224s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/39614081412852278163214696448s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/79228162825704556326429392896s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/158456325651409112652858785792s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/316912651302818225305717571584s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/633825302605636450611435143168s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1267650605211272901222870286336s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2535301210422545802445740572672s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/5070602420845091604891481145344s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1014120484169018320978962290688s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2028240968338036641957924581376s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4056481936676073283915849162752s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/8112963873352146567831698325504s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/16225927746742913135663396651008s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/32451855493485826271326793302112s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/64903710986971652542653586604224s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/129807421937933305085307773204448s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/25961484387586661017061554640896s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/519229687751733220341231092817984s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1038459375435466440682462185635968s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/207691875087093288136492437171936s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/415383750174186576272984874343872s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/830767500348373152545969748687744s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/166153500069674630509193949375488s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/332307000139349261018387898750976s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/664614000278698522036775797501952s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1329228000557397044073551595003904s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2658456001114794088147103190007808s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/5316912002229588176293420618001616s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/10633824004459176352586841376003232s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/21267648008918352705173682752006464s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/42535296017836705410347365504012928s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/85070592035673410820694731008025856s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/170141184071346821641389462016051712s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/340282368142693643282778924032103424s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/680564736285387286565557848064206848s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1361129472570774573131115776128413696s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/272225894534154914626223155225682739392s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/544451789068309829252446310451365478784s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/108890357813661975850489262092731155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/21778071562732395170097852418546231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4355614312546479034019570483709246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/871122862509295806803914096741849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/174224572501819161360782819348369246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/34844914500363832272156578669673849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/6968982900072766454431311733934769246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1393796580014532908862623467868953849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/278759316002905781772524893573790769246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/55751863200581156354504978714758153849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/111503726401162312710909995442916773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/22300745280232462542181999088583354773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/44601490560464925084363998177166670773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/89202981120929850168727996354333340773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1784059622418170003374559927086666814773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/35681192448363400067491198541733336294773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/71362384896726800134998397083466664494773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/142724769793453600269996794167333329894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2854495395869072005399934883346666597894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/57089907917381440107998697666933331957894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/114179815834762880215997393338666639157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/2283596316695257604319946866773333783157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/45671926333905152086398937335466661663157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/913438526678103041727978746709333333263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1826877053361606083559575934186666665263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/36537541067232121671191515083733333305263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/73075082134464243342383030167466666605263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/14615016426892848668476060334933333005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/29230032853785697336952120669866660005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/584600657075713946739042413397333300005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1169201314151427893478084827946666000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/23384026283028557869561696558933330000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/467680525660571157391233931178666600000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/9353610513211423147824678623573333000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/18707221026422462896493546471466660000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/374144420528449257929870929429333300000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/7482888410568985158597418588586666000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/14965776821137770317194837771733330000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/299315536422755406343896755434666600000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/5986310728455108126877935108693333000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/11972621457110216253758770217386666000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/239452429142204325075175404347733330000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/4789048582844086501503508086954666600000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/95780971656881730030070161739093333000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/191561943313763460060140323478166666000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/3831238866275269201202806469563333300000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/7662477732550538402405612939126666600000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/15324955465100768804811225782533333000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/30649910930201537609622451565066666000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/61299821860403075219244903130133333000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/122599643720806150438489806260266666000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/245199287441612300876979612520533333000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/490398574883224601753959225041066666000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/980797149766449203507918450082133333000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/1961594299532896407015369001642666660000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/3923188599065792814030738003285333330000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/7846377198131585628061476006570666660000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/15692754396263171256129520013143333300000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/31385508792526342512259040026286666600000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/62771017585052685024518080052573333300000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/12554203517010537004903616010516666600000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/25108407034021074009807232021033333000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/50216814068042148019614464042066666000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/10043362813608429603922892808413333300000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/20086725627216859207845785616826666600000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/40173451254433718415691577233653333000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/80346902508867436831383154467306666600000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/16069380501773487366276630893463333300000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/32138761003546974732553261786933333000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/64277522007093949465106523573866666000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/12855504401418789893021304715733333000000000000000000000005263157894773849246231155776s, 1 gross 1.50. SONNEKNEK'S 1/25711

A SERIES OF LESSONS IN

Plain Writing

By H. J. PUTMAN and W. J. KINSLEY.

A New Work. New Plan. Admirably Arranged. Elegantly Engraved. Finest of Heavy Paper. Best of Printing.
Half the Usual Price.

PRICE, FIFTY CENTS.

The copies are elegantly engraved on copper, printed from stone on the finest kind of very heavy plate paper. All copies new; no rehash. There are two parts:

PART ONE.

Part I contains seventeen slips. These slips are not bound and are all devoted to plain writing. There are two slips devoted to movement exercises, giving fifty-five different exercises. The small letters are given in the order in which they should be taught.

A great variety of words, introducing nothing but small letters. The finest set of plain capitals ever given. Following the letter given for practice comes a short word introducing the capital, followed by a short sentence, starting with the same capital.

The figures are unadorned by means of staff lines, and a great variety of commercial abbreviations, given. Forms of draft, receipt and letter are prominent features. One slip of solid writing is given.

PART TWO.

Part 2 is the "Instruction Book" to accompany the slips. This is the most complete one ever given in connection with a work of this kind.

It contains chapters on "Materials," "Position" (giving cuts), "Form," "Movement," and "General Information." There are twenty lessons mapped out.

The slips and "Instruction Book" are enclosed in a neat and substantial case.

The reader may think from the generous use of the adjectives in this advertisement that we have been employed to write up "ads" for Barman's Circus, but you will find below a few opinions from prominent penmen and educators, and the best of it is we have more of them. Watch the different penmanship papers and you will see some of the others.

TESTIMONIALS.

PROFESSOR A. N. PALMER, Editor "Western Penman": "I have examined 'A Series of Lessons in Plain Writing,' by Messrs. Putman & Kinsley, and am well pleased with the work. The slips of movement exercises alone are worth the entire price of the work. The engraving on the copies is as fine as I ever saw."

PROFESSOR G. M. SMITH, President Business College, Richmond, Va.: "I am much pleased with the style and arrangement of your series as well as with the instructions."

PROFESSOR J. C. KANE, Editor & Publisher's Bus. Col., Baltimore, Md.: "Your slips are just splendid. Professor J. C. GUNTS, Penman and Secretary Bethany College and Normal Institute, London, Kan.: "I have given it a careful examination, and will say, in my estimation, it is designed to meet a long felt want in the Public Schools, where, I trust, you will find sale for them by car loads."

PROFESSOR W. G. CARRISON, Penman, Christie's Business College, Lock Haven, Pa.: "Your 'Series of Lessons in Plain Writing' is the best of the kind that has come to my notice."

Agents wanted in every town and school. A liberal discount given. Money can be made selling the "Lessons." Collect all other "Compendiums" on writing, send for a copy of the "Lessons" and compare. One can be ordered in this manner, and it will prevent defrauding the remaining people who want copies. If that work is not better arranged, has not a better quality of work, printing, paper, etc., and does not give more for the money than any similar thing published, we will refund the money and pay postage for return, providing that it is returned in good condition.

Price, FIFTY CENTS. Stamps not taken. Address either of the places named below this is nearest to you.

PUTMAN &amp; KINSLEY.

P. O. Box 189, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. 35- P. O. Box 399, COLUMBIA, MO.

A SET OF Flourished
CAPITALS,
20 cents.

TWO SETS.
one Business,
one Flourished,
35 cents.

To introduce my work to the readers of the P. A. H., I will write cards for the coming month at the following low rates:

Plain White ..... 15 cents per doz.
Plain Gold ..... 20 " "
Gift or Plain Bevel ..... 25 " "

All orders filled promptly and sent postpaid.

D. B. HANSON,
Columbia Business College,
COLUMBIA, MO.

I would be pleased to exchange Specimens with any in the Fraternity.

Another Scribe on the List.

He will send you a sheet of combinations, a set of capitals, or a specimen of Flourishing, at 10 cents each—all for a quarter. He desires to hear from all "free boys," and promises to send them something fine. Write at once.

G. J. KRETCHMER,
545 Pearl St., Cleveland, O.

COMMENDATION.

Mr. Kretschmer is an excellent penman in all branches of the art, and his work is bound to give good satisfaction. W. D. SHAWALTER,
Editor Penart Herald.

THE NEW PACKARD

Commercial Arithmetic

JUST OUT.

Thoroughly revised and wholly renewed; with important additions of working material, making the most practical and complete text-book on Arithmetic before the public. Printed from new type on the finest paper and elegantly bound. Suited to class instruction, and to private study. Sent by mail for $1.50. Proper reduction to schools.

Address, S. S. PACKARD, Publisher,
101 East 23d St., New York.

PACKARD'S NEW MANUAL

—OF—

BOOK-KEEPING AND CORRESPONDENCE

Adapted to Business College work, and to private schools and private pupils.

This is the clearest, crispest, most thorough and least nonsensical work on book-keeping before the public. It contains just what is essential to a comprehensive knowledge of the subject, and that in the best possible form. The instruction is complete but not burdensome. The Correspondence part is promoted by teachers to be without an equal for the space occupied.

This book retails at $1, with proper reduction to schools.

Address, S. S. PACKARD, Publisher,
101 East 23d St., New York.

THE BOY PENMAN

—OF—

Libby Prison

Is now at Keokuk, Iowa,
(A city of 20,000 inhabitants.)

Where he has been lectured the past (16) SIXTEEN YEARS.

THE BUSINESS COLLEGE

Over which he has presided for a number of years, has assisted hundreds of young men and women to respectable and lucrative positions.

Students from a distance are given reduced rates. Business course equal to the best. The Ornamental Penmanship Course unsurpassed. Normal Course for Teachers unexcelled.

Address (with 3 letter stamps),
THE PEIRCE BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Chandler H. Peirce, Pres't. } Keokuk, Iowa
J. L. Frone, Sec'y.

C. E. JONES'

LESSONS BY MAIL.

—18—

Automatic Penmanship.

This is no experiment. Success is certain to every one taking lessons who is willing to work. No student has failed yet, and I have had hundreds.

To my knowledge, no one else teaches Automatic Penmanship by mail.

The course is systematically arranged as far as is possible, but the lessons must be varied in every case to suit the particular needs of each student.

This is one of the most beautiful kinds of pen work and to within the reach of everyone, certain, who will take 24 lessons.

Some have done beautiful work after six lessons. All copies are fresh from my pen.

PRICES.

12 Lessons, .....	$1.00
24 Lessons, .....	5.00
Alphabets, each, .....	15
1 Handsome Motto, size 7x20 lettered and ornamented in a variety of colors, .....	25
1 Automatic Stamping Pen, .....	25
5 Automatic Shading (assorted), .....	25
5 assorted powders for marking ink for same, .....	25
12 Ornamented designs, .....	1.00
Cards, per doz., .....	20

Address,

PROF. C. E. JONES,
TABOR, IOWA

TESTIMONIALS

Jones is one of the very finest Automatic pen artists.

The Western Penman.

The art of lettering with an automatic pen has been reduced to a fine point by C. E. Jones, Principal of the Business Department of the Tabor, Iowa College. That he has also the faculty of imparting skill to others is attested by numerous specimens of the work of his students, which we have been permitted to see.

The Penman's Art Journal.

Specimens of automatic pen-lettering received from Mr. Jones are the finest we have ever noticed.

Ed. PEN ART HERALD.

THE OBERLIN BUSINESS COLLEGE FURNISHES, AT MODERATE COST, THE VERY BEST BUSINESS TRAINING. It is progressive and thorough in all its appointments and departments, and is rapidly increasing in patronage and popularity. The Business Practice and Office Departments are not equalled in Ohio or surpassed in America, and contain a more complete business training than the entire course of many business colleges that claim to be among the best. Send for Commercial World to McKee & Henderson, Oberlin, Ohio.

The Oberlin College Writing Department

Is exclusively a School of Penmanship, and is without exception the very best in America. The specialty of this school is Teachers', Business Writers' and Pen Artists' Training. It also gives thorough drill on the Black Board.

OBERLIN ELECTIC SCHOOL OF SHORT HAND AND TYPE WRITING.

Facilities the best. Teacher writes from 150 to 175 words per minute. Send for "Stenographic World," to McKEE & HENDERSON, OBERLIN, O.

Vol. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER, 1887.

No. 3.

A WISH.

I would that our system of vocal symbols—the language we speak—were more replete with synonyms. To such an extent am I an enthusiast on the subject of originality, that I would delight in using some unheard-of expression in every editorial the HERALD contains. But the language is too limited. We are compelled, all of us, to say things which we do not design to say. How? The use of threadbare and dusty phraseology renders the thought we wish to express, oftentimes, of a too ordinary nature. The reader, being familiar with the words, imagines that the imprisoned thought which struggles to escape through them is but the repetition of some one else's mental creation or the lineal descendant of some historic literary production. So, when the graph, and our failure to do so will furnish the best possible illustration of the idea we desired to clothe in words, and which, because of the second-hand nature of that clothing, must fail to impress the reader with its real nature and essence.

ACCURATE COPIES.

In the October number of the Western Penman, Professor C. S. Chapman of Des Moines, Iowa, in commenting upon one of our articles in a former number of that paper on "Accurate Copies," expresses a very pertinent thought, the essence of which is, that it is not perfection of form that many teachers object to in furnishing models or copies to their students, but that it all depends on whose idea of perfect forms it is desired that they shall adopt.

Replying, in brief, permit us to add from time to time, as may seem necessary or appropriate, to offer a word of criticism, of suggestion or of comment, upon the existing methods of teaching business writing. The conviction is growing upon us daily and semi-daily that before another decade of years shall have been spent in the cause of practical and useful education, those of our tranquil-minded brethren who are now permitting the anti-utilitarian in practical penmanship to be imparted to their pupils, will so thoroughly awaken to the demands of the business community as to institute a radical reform in the writing room, and to regard the stereotyped methods, which are too fearfully common in our present system, as the undeveloped vagaries of early crudity in the work of business education. Prophetic fingers point to the fact that changes to know the cause of all this contentment and strife between some of our prominent workers, just now, about hand engraved and photo engraved writing; also, the difference between an electrotype and an engraving.

To our knowledge there are in this country about three highly skilled engravers who do work "by hand." Their accurate knowledge of beautiful forms and their extensive experience, enable them, from even a poor copy, to produce elegant work, for which, in many instances, the penman receives the credit. Of course the more carefully the original is prepared the better will be the results; but, excepting the general design and style of the piece, the plate, when finished, usually bears little resemblance to the writer's copy. In justice to our pen-artists, how-

*I never was on the dull, tame shore.
But I loved the great sea more and more.
And backward flew to her billowy breast.
Like a bird that seeketh its mother's nest.*

Print.

The above beautiful verse of script was originally executed by PROF. H. W. FLICKINGER, and is taken from one of the copy-books of "Barnes' National System of Penmanship," a cut having been procured for the HERALD by Mr. J. M. Hawkes, who represents the house of A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

journalist vainly endeavors to throw new coloring on the ideas which mock the powers of expression, he usually abandons the task with a healthy and distinct consciousness of having failed to say the very thing which he tried hardest to frame in intelligible language. Do you understand us? Of course you will agree that if the foregoing sentences mean anything, you fail to discover it. Good! They look like dummies to us, too, and, considered apart from that indescribable and inexplicable something in our mind which prompted us to write them, they have a sort of insane jingle, and bear little resemblance to and convey a remarkably small portion of the thought itself. Why? The antiquity of the phrases used explains it. We exultantly vowed that we would say something, when we began this para-that, so long as a standard is used, and ideas of perfection which are not wholly out of keeping with fundamental and primary conceptions of beauty, and which are not noticeably emaciated or distorted, are embodied in copies, it can make little difference as to the location of the brain which planned or conceived them.

ONE PARAGRAPH

Will be sufficient space in which to rap-turously remark that our editorial on "Business Writing" in the last issue of the HERALD has attracted not only unusually wide attention among the teachers of penmanship, but the argument which we earnestly attempted to set forth has been enthusiastically endorsed and approved on every side. In the full confidence that a renovation is necessary, we shall continue for the better, in this direction, must be made; that business writing must be taught in accordance with the meaning of the term; that our ability to write under the pressure of hurry and rush must be as available as our ability to add or subtract numbers under like conditions; and that it is the part of wisdom to diligently seek for more light and to eagerly grasp any improvement which may be brought forth in any quarter or by any authority.

QUERY BOX LECTURE.

A RAMBLING TALK ON A VARIETY OF SUBJECTS.

I have been requested to explain the different processes of engraving specimens of penmanship. My interrogator wishes ever, it must be admitted that it would require more than the combined mechanical skill of Holab, Havens and McLees to surpass the work of our most skillful penmen. Photo-engraving consists in producing on metal and ready for printing an exact photograph of the original pen-work.

The wood-engraver photographs his copy, usually upon a smooth wooden surface, and, by combining hand and machine work, produces a "wood cut," with any desired changes or corrections. Before this can be used on a printing press—on account of its liability to break—it must be electrotyped, which is done wholly by machinery. An impression is taken in a sort of plastic or semi-liquid metal, or wax, which is afterward thoroughly hardened and made ready for the press. Duplicate copies of a cut can be made by this process very cheaply, and within a day's notice.

Portraits, to be made by a photographic process, are first drawn in india ink by a special artist.

"Do I write well enough to be called an amateur penman?" The question comes from our young friend J. B. Graff of Riverton, New Jersey, who has a style of writing which, possessed by many, would prove a fortune. He writes with great ease, and his pages have a neat and pretty effect which few of our penmen can impart to their ordinary writing. Yes, my good friend, you are entitled to be ranked, not only as an amateur, which indicates that penmanship is not your profession, but upon entering the teaching field you would at once be classed among the best in the list, so far, at least, as the ability to execute counts in the race.

"Is the profession supporting the HERALD as it should? Are you receiving encouraging patronage? Is the HERALD now a sure and permanent enterprise?" A chorus of voices propound the above so beautifully carried out in this series, we must all admit that it is in advance of kindred publications.

DASHING SENTENCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PEN-ART HERALD:

My Dear Sir: Your late article, "Accurate Copies," touches matter on which I have meditated. In your new paper will you stand strictly by such ideas? Can you afford to do so? As for myself, I am a student rather than a purveyor, and I long to see the time when bold and fearless journals, exponents of the art and defenders of the science in its purity, will tear off the mask of diplomacy and undauntedly assail the ward politicians of educational literature who follow in the wake of the science, drumming for public patronage, and set them down at their true value. Give us the best and most accurate copies circumstances will admit of, a thorough and impartial investigation of every phase of the science, and although you may lose some advertising, you will greatly advance the cause for which you write.

To say the least of the matter, the late best possible copy and fully explain its processes.

Yours,

CAYCE PEN.

SOME OF THE PEOPLE TO WHOM THE HERALD IS ESPECIALLY INDEBTED,

AS WELL AS APPROPRIATELY AND PROPERLY GRATEFUL.

To Professor S. E. Bartow, the genial and accomplished penman of the Ohio Business University, Cleveland, for a club of twenty five subscribers, taken from among the students of that institution.

To Professor Fielding Schofield, for a club of nine subscribers from the Normal Penmanship Department of the Gem City College, Quincy, Ill.

To Professor U. McKee, the most successful teacher of penmanship in the United States, for a club of ten, from his deservedly popular and always prosperous school, at Oberlin, Ohio.

To Professor J. B. Duryea, Des Moines, Iowa, for a club of sixteen, composed of his students in the Iowa Business College.

To Professor C. E. Jones, Tabor, Iowa, of the United States and Canada. The work will embrace—first, the names, addresses and a very short sketch of the lives of all who are following penmanship as a profession; second, the names and addresses of all amateur penmen and students of the art; third, a complete catalogue of business colleges.

No charges are made for inserting names. If penmen, students and business college men everywhere will cooperate by giving the desired information, a most useful work will be the result.

Let the responses be general, and immediate, please.

Fraternally yours,

F. S. HEATH.

We sincerely trust that every reader of the HERALD will heartily aid our esteemed friend, Mr. Heath, in securing the information necessary for the preparation of such a work. We are sure that a publication of the kind, if comprehensive and complete, would prove of great value to every one interested in the affairs of our calling; and our full confidence in Mr. Heath's capability for the work warrants us in assuring our constituents that it will be interrogative sentences. Yes; we receive as much support as we could expect, considering the prejudice with which we must contend. We do not expect to make money out of the paper for sometime yet. We did not enter the work with that expectation. But we shall work away, patiently, laying a foundation for future results, and we have confidence enough in the people to believe that, when we convince them that we are thoroughly and emphatically in earnest, they will not be slow in showing us the degree to which they appreciate and value our efforts, in a financial sense.

As a striking example of originality in Script forms, we are pleased to present the above cluster of beautiful chirographic oddities, with the intelligence that they are engraved from the pen-and-ink copy of PROF. CHANDLER H. PORCE, Keokuk, Iowa.

A correspondent wishes to know whether the new and popular compendium, A SERIES OF LESSONS IN PLAIN WRITING, is equal, in every respect, to the higher priced standard works of that character. Considering the amount of work presented, the style of engraving and printing used, and the very thorough, available and complete instructions given, the LESSONS are fully equal to anything published. And in point of adaption to the wants of almost every class of learners, the systematic and beautiful arrangement of the copies, and the theories and ideas script alphabet offered us by H. C. Spencer, is something that borders upon the sensational. For him to offer such forms in lieu of better and more easily executed Spencerian, or to propose them at a time when more artistic yet simpler and more acceptable forms were extant and had never been conned by hundreds of students of penmanship, was, I dare say, a surprise to more than your humble writer.

Until I have evidence that they do, I am inclined to doubt that either Lyman P. Spencer or H. W. Flickinger indorsed that alphabet. They occupy, I think, more consistent ground, and verily, verily, I say unto you, my brethren, that in point of executive skill these two modest gentlemen are the stoutest lances that stand the penmen's table 'round.

Apropos to the foregoing, we have Isaacs' war-path letter. What we want is not to discourage the engraver, but to advance penmanship. The artist may be both penman and engraver. There is no prohibitory measure which prevents a man engraving his own snakes.

Flatter our attainments and we can stand by, silent and unmoved; but ridicule and belittle us, and detract from our skill, and you pain us. Again, give us the who never writes us without sending in new subscriptions.

To Professor C. N. Crandle, Dixon, Ill., who has recently favored us with a good club.

To Professor C. M. Robinson, La Fayette, Ind., who sends clubs whenever opportunity offers.

To Professor G. Bixler, Wooster, O., for a club of five, representing his students in the American Pen-Art Hall.

To Mr. Fred A. Vollrath, Eucyus, O., for several extra subscriptions accompanying his own.

To W. H. McAlpine, Stamford, N. Y., a pupil of Professor B. H. Spencer, the Albany penman, for a club of three.

AN EXCELLENT IDEA.

A LETTER FROM PROFESSOR F. S. HEATH, PENMAN IN SHAW'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SHAW'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, PORTLAND, ME., Nov. 5, 1887.

FRIEND SHOWALTER:—I am contemplating getting out a complete directory of the professional and amateur penmen carefully gotten up and with painstaking thoroughness.

THE FORMER EDITOR OF THE PENMAN'S ART GAZETTE

HIS ADIEU TO HIS SUBSCRIBERS, FRIENDS AND CO-LABORERS.

KIND FRIENDS:—We have retired from journalism! Why, do you ask? Are we rich enough? Yes. Did you ever hear of an editor of a penman's paper retiring on less than a million? Imagine our friend Showalter paying us fifty thousand dollars for the good will of our paper; imagine us, rolling in wealth, after a short career as a newspaper man; imagine one million readers anxiously awaiting the next issue of the Gazette—anxious to see us expose some more of the humbuggery and fraud practiced in our profession; yes, kind readers, indulge your Byronic imagination to its fullest extent, but for Heaven's sake, don't imagine that you are swindled! Don't imagine, either, that we were driven from the field. We leave it of our own choosing. We ought to have known that, for us, other fields were more congenial; that other lines of effort were better suited to our abilities. We always knew that we could not carry a hod of bricks up to the eleventh story; we did not know that we could not edit a penman's paper; we are aware of both facts now. We could not continue to devote the time and labor to the Gazette which its welfare and success would require. To do so would compel us to neglect our other business—that of engraving—to an extent that we did not wish to do.

Brother Showalter has entered the arena to stay. He likes the work, and is willing to labor for years, if needs be, for mere current expenses, in order to build up a permanent periodical. He is ambitious in that line, and devotes his whole time to the work. His new paper, the PEN-ART HERALD is certainly all that could be desired. I sincerely hope that you will all unite in giving him support and encouragement. He promises to fill out our subscription list with the Herald, and I am sure that all will be pleased with his bright and excellent paper.

To all who have so liberally patronized our paper; to those who have so generously stood by the Gazette and its editor in his forcible denunciations of all forms of charity—we wish to extend our earnest and cordial thanks. We may have made mistakes. We may have been too hasty in our conclusions at times. And if we have wronged any one, we stand ready to offer any apology the occasion may call for or demand.

We hope the HERALD will become the representative journal of its class. We offer no advice as to how it could be made such, but we do hope to see the time when we can HERALD it as such!

Without a grain of malice and with comprehensive charity, we are

Your humble servant,

H. F. VOGEL

Formerly Publisher of The Penman's Art Gazette, Chicago.

THE SECRETARY AND TREASURER OF THE NATIONAL PENMAN'S ASSOCIATION,

Whose handsome portrait and autograph are here presented, was born at St. Albans, Maine, when the nineteenth century was fifty-two years old.

Like the great majority of our famous ink-scatterers, C. M. Robinson early manifested a taste and liking for good penmanship. His primary educational training was received through the district schools, after which he pursued and completed a full course in the Corinna Union Academy. His career as a student was continued by taking a book-keeping course under Professor D. H. Sherman, and a series of lessons in penmanship under Professor H. C. Kendall, the well-known artist-penman of Boston. After finishing his school life in this city, he accepted a position as teacher of penmanship in the public schools of Brunswick, Maine. At the end of this year's work he became identified with the city-school of Bath, where he taught book-keeping in the high school and writing in the grades. He was elected for the third year, but resigned to accept a position as teacher of drawing and penmanship in the city schools of Lawrenceburg, Indiana.

After two years of very successful work in this capacity, he received flattering offers from three different cities, and decided upon Lafayette, Indiana, where, for the last six years, he has labored in the interests of education, having been instructor in arithmetic and book-keeping in the high school, superintendent of penmanship in the city schools, and for the past two years principal of the Union Business College.

C. M. Robinson

This institution, under his efficient management, has become one of the leading schools for useful training in the west, and has, during the past year, enrolled over two hundred students.

Mr. Robinson dismisses his school during vacation months and spends the heated term with his family at the beautiful pleasure and health resort of St. Joseph, Michigan, where he owns a summer cottage—returning early in September to his school duties with greatly augmented vigor and proficiency for the work.

From his school circulars one is impressed with the fact that he entertains living and spirited views upon the subject of practical education. He is a firm believer in simplicity and plainness in business writing, and deprecates the use of extra lines and impracticable movements.

His past experience and education peculiarly fit him for a leader in his chosen profession, and as such he is universally regarded—having, at the first meeting of the National Penmen's association, which convened at Erie, Pennsylvania, in July last, been chosen as secretary and treasurer of that important organization for the current year. Considering that in this body there were representatives of our calling from every part of the country, the compliment paid to Mr. Robinson, in selecting him for this official position, was no slight one.

Copy-presses and specimens of plain and ornamental writing, the lines of which are so adjusted and are of such a quality as to render them about as handsome as it would seem possible for trained natural talent to produce, have recently been sent us by our friend, C. P. Zaner, Columbus, O.

SOME SENSIBLE SENTENCES FROM A PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHER.

HOPKINS, MO., OCT. 27, 1887.

EDITOR PEN-ART HERALD, CLEVELAND, O.

DEAR SIR—From every source we are hearing complaints of the inefficiency of the penmanship instruction in the public schools, and of the inability of the common school teacher to successfully instruct in this important branch. It is generally admitted that something must be done—that they must be dealt with—but what and how are the troublesome questions.

I suggest that it would be an excellent plan for the HERALD to devote at least one column each month to presenting matter which shall not only be of interest and value to this special class of teachers, but which shall be of a comprehensible and utilitarian nature. They are aware of their failing; but in looking over the penmen's papers they are met with an array of pen-art work, and the instructions, if there be any, are of such a hue that it is almost entirely impossible for them to grasp them, hence they are forced to the conclusion that proficiency in this branch is out of their reach, and that all directions for the acquirement of a good hand-writing are necessarily clouded in mystery, and are intended for some specially talented class of learners.

Contributors to this department should bear in mind that all teachers are not MANNES OF PARKERS, who can supply what is omitted, but that they are, in the strictest sense, pupils, and must be instructed accordingly. They must be given the simplest exercises and forms, with definite and specific directions for practicing and teaching them. They need more than nicely engraved copies, with the lusty injunction to practice this five minutes, and that ten minutes. If they were made to understand how, as well as what, the bill would not seem half so high or steep.

Let a teacher, on Monday, say, "Children, we will write small o's to-day. Get your slates and pencils, and I want to see how many can make one real nicely every time I tap the desk with my pencil." On Tuesday he says, "We will make small u's to-day. Write ten minutes on this letter. Work hard, now, while I solve this problem for John." Which method would produce the more good? We need more methods and less copies. Yours fraternally,

C. E. BALL.

We shall be glad to hear from all live teachers upon this important theme, and shall take pleasure in giving all space that may be needed for profitable discussions and valuable suggestions.

A WEBSTER SPEAKS.

We have strong evidence, in the prompt appearance and general character of the second number of THE PEN-ART HERALD that it has "come to stay," and as it is introduced to us we feel confident that we but voice the sentiment of the profession when we pronounce it one of the best penmen's papers that we have ever seen. Not that it transcends in beauty and elegance anything of the kind we have ever beheld, or that we see in its illustrations a greater degree of skill and artistic design than is found in some of the leading penmen's papers of the present day, or that the material of which it is composed is superior to that used by any other publisher; but the warm, genial spirit running through its columns, the clearness and courtesy of its diction, and the fact that it is not an advertising sheet, published in the interests of some commercial school, are elements which commend it to the home circle of every family in the land, as well as to every penman, giving promise of a healthful and invigorating influence in the field of the penmanship. Judging from the beginning, we have strong reason to expect this publication to add new life, vigor and dignity to the profession.

If the editor was spending a few weeks abroad for his health, we would feel like saying a few words about him personally; but as his physical condition is in no present need of such means of recuperation, and as there is an immediate railway connection between Cleveland and Geneva, with the space of but two short hours between us, we think it wise to pacify ourselves with the commonplace remark that "he is the right man in the right place," and if we do not grow wiser, stronger and better under the influence of his new departure, it will doubtless be because we do not make wise use of the information he disseminates.

The needs and aspirations of mankind are the great incentive powers to invention and progress, and it is to be hoped that the need of a stronger and more solid front in the penmen's ranks may so control the heart and mind of this young devotee to the shrine of the literature of penmanship as to impel him strongly in the direction of elevating the standard of excellence, of intensifying the desire of the learner to reach that standard in the attainment of skill, of developing a better understanding of the most effective means of imparting instruction in the art of giving new dignity and character to the literature of penmanship, and of strengthening the cords of friendship and good will that should pervade the brotherhood in every calling and profession.

We shall look with pleasurable anticipations for future numbers of the PEN-ART HERALD. S. R. WEBSTER.
Geneva, Ohio.

The Pen-Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature.

Subscription price, Twenty-five cents per year. Single numbers, Ten cents each.
 See our Premium Offers on page 7.
 Do not send stamps when postal note can be obtained.
 Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 inch, 1 month,	$2	3 months,	$5	1 year,	$12
3 " " " "	4	3 " " " "	10	1 " " " "	25
1/2 col, 1 " "	8	3 " " " "	20	1 " " " "	50
1 " " " "	12	3 " " " "	30	1 " " " "	100

CLUB RATES:
 5 to 10, Sixty-five cents each.
 10 to 25, Sixty cents each.
 25 to 50, Rates made known on application.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every business or other kind of live school in the land, to act as our representative and to solicit subscriptions and advertisements for the HERALD. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 569 PEARL STREET.
 W. D. SHOWALTER,
 Editor and Publisher
 Entered at the Post Office, at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class mail matter.

LEAVES FROM OUR THOUGHT-CALENDAR.

We feel that our first duty in connection with the editorial work of this issue is to fling an animated apology at the most talented and popular man in the profession of penmanship. It would seem needless to add that reference is made to our brother editor and jovial friend, A. J. Scarborough, of whom the fraternity need not expect to have a second edition. Sometime ago we received a formal invitation to witness a wedding ceremony in which Mr. Scarborough was to act a very interesting and important part. Our failure, in our last number, to mention this most critical event in the life of one in whom every reader of our HERALD takes an interest, was not, we assure our friend, intentional, but was caused through an oversight, for which we are principally although not wholly responsible. Mr. Scarborough has long been identified, in a conspicuous manner, with the interests of practical education and penmanship, and we are safe in saying that no man has exerted a more potent influence for good, or has done more toward linking the profession ofigraphy with other and more varied interests than he. Under his able guidance the old "Penman's Gazette," which, in Gaskell's time, was looked upon by most people as an ingenious advertising medium with an occasional shadow of literary merit, has developed into a stately magazine, containing the choicest cuttings from the current literary literature of our times, diversified and beautified by mellow and palatable arrays of truth in pictures of humor. Although, at this late date, the last echoes of the wedding bells are but faintly trembling on our ears, we cannot help offering our delayed but hearty and heartfelt congratulations, with the earnest hope that there may be in store for them no less of light than of shadow.

SOME of our tender-minded brethren seem to inhale the impression that, because we are such a pronounced believer in sensible business writing, we do not appreciate, and are striving to indirectly condemn artistic penmanship, but we can candidly assure every one that we have no such motive. Rather would we wish to aid in establishing and defining the proper sphere, and the relative importance of each attainment. It would be an exhibition of poor taste in a card-writer to use a plain and rugged business style in filling his card orders, and yet that does not signify that such a hand is equally unavailable in the business office. And it would be still more inappropriate for a book-keeper or correspondent to indulge in the ornamental windings or the airy waltzes of the whole-arm movement penman; yet because that which ministers to the art taste cannot be utilized in practical business life, does not argue that it is nonsensical. It is a diseased brain which will pronounce an acquirement utterly useless when it merely fails to profitably serve our own small and narrow business purposes.

We have been favored with a copy of the Harrisburg (Pennsylvania) Telegram, containing a very interesting interview with the accomplished king of illuminated card-writers, our old friend Mr. Carl Temple. In the course of the conversation, the reporter learns some very interesting things about the business of writing cards, not the least important of which is the fact that while the income of the business is large, the enormous hotel and traveling expenses consume about all of it, so that, aside from the fund of experience and practical information which it is possible for the traveling scribe to accumulate, the riches usually possessed by him are largely imaginary. Mr. Temple says that "he does not expect to ever become wealthy,"

"What a man knows should find its expression in what he does. The notion of superior knowledge is simply in that it leads to a perfectly unworldly mind."

We have all heard of the "Back-Hand" writing of BROK. C. A. FAUST, of Chicago, and it is a pleasure for us to be able to present, at above, such a neat specimen of it. It was reduced one-half in the photo-engraving.

yet we hope that, in this, at least, he will not realize his expectations.

During the past month letters have been received from almost every section of the country, complimenting the appearance of the first and second issues, and expressing the warmest hopes of our success. To nearly all we have replied through correspondence, yet we cannot help thanking, publicly, those who have manifested such an appreciative interest in our welfare. We are all the more grateful for these letters and kind expressions from the fact that a great many have consistently enclosed postal notes and currency, thereby convincing us at once that they mean what they say. We like to know that our efforts please you, and we assure you that an expression of your good-will is always a source of inspiration to us. But our inspiration takes a more substantial form when your complimentary words are wrapped around a green-back. In that case they leave no aching void in their track. But when a professional writes us an extravagant letter, wishing us all the success which he can find terms to describe, and neglects to enclose his admission fee, we cannot help confessing that there is a hollow sound about his words which must be felt to be appreciated.

HAVE your subscription begin with the first number of the HERALD.

SCATTERED STRAWS.

A large portion of our time is taken up in trying to make apologies for errors and personal injuries which our brothers from every side accuse us of having perpetrated. While this sort of employment is highly enjoyable and congenial, we wish to state that when, in future, your specimens are not noticed or some glaring injustice is done you, it will be an error of the head, and will be repaired in the earliest possible issue of the HERALD. We shrink from the thought of wronging any one or of slighting the smallest of art's children. But if it should make you feel better, when your name is missed in our personal notices, write us an animated letter, indulging in all available epithets. If it comforts your shattered spirit or soothes your dislocated longings for notoriety, we would be diminutive indeed did we protest.

We have recently purchased the subscription list and good-will of the Penman's Art Gazette, which, for the past six months has been edited and published by our friend, Mr. H. F. Vogel, Chicago, Illinois. The Gazette has always been a bright paper, and was winning encouraging success; but its editor has entered more profitable and promising fields of labor, and he carries with him our best wishes. He is now a staff artist on the Chicago Graphic, and is utilizing his art talent to good advantage.

Bryant and F. L. Dyke, all of the Spencerian College, are nationally known scribes. Professor W. L. Shinn, of the Cleveland Business College, is a fine practical writer, as is Professor H. T. Tanner, of the Forest City Business College. J. F. Fish and P. T. Phillips, graduates of Professor Michael, are now residents of the "Forest City." N. W. Dunham, a graduate of Professor M. I. Hubbard of South New Lyme, Ohio, is an enthusiastic and successful teacher. G. J. Kretschmer is one of the future's great penmen, and is rapidly coming to the front. Masters James Connolly, J. F. Haederle and G. W. Leopold are among the most skillful boy-writers to be found anywhere. T. Nelson, a former pupil of A. N. Palmer at the "Lakeside," Chicago, and later of J. P. Wilson, is a first class penman and a first-class young man. W. W. Jackson, a former penman at the Spencerian College, now teacher in the West High School, has an excellent local reputation. Professor F. D. Gorsline is a skilled, practical writer and experienced teacher. L. J. Grace is a finished pen-artist, and does some very elaborate work in that line. Professor M. J. C. Caton uses a dashing style of off-hand penmanship, and has seen service in the teaching field. Mr. J. D. Holcomb is one of the best plain writers we have ever met, and is a great lover of the art. J. L. Sweet writes a good hand. H. O. Bernhardt is teacher of writing in the Cleveland Business College. This completes the list so far as we are informed.

Professor Chandler H. Peirce, whose post-office address is known to all of our readers, has published a series of copy-books which are a complete innovation in that line of authorship. They are based on an untried plan; are profusely illustrated and contain plenty of healthy instruction.

He also presents us with a copy of his "Philosophical Treatise," an exhaustive and valuable work, without which a penman's library is incomplete in an emphatic sense. All should have it.

AN UNIQUE AND VALUABLE FEATURE

Of the HERALD in the future will be a beautifully illustrated series of Lessons in Pen-Art, covering all branches of the subject, and presenting many original designs and ideas. This course is to be given by Miss Anna Nintin of Grand Island, Nebraska, who, in our estimation, is the finest lady penman in this or any other country. Her work is peculiarly strong and graceful, being fully equal to that of our best professionals. She promises her very best efforts, and we feel safe in predicting that this will be an unusually valuable course of lessons. While they will be adapted to all classes, the nature of the designs which shall be presented and which will be engraved direct from the pen and ink copy of Miss Nintin, will render them of especial interest and value to amateurs. To our knowledge, no lady has ever before attempted anything of the kind, consequently we are somewhat proud to be able to make such an announcement. We hope to begin the series in the December issue.

THINK over the matter of subscribing. MEDITATE upon our premium offers.

Cleveland can boast, we think, of a full share of penmen and teachers of the art. Among her "leading lights" may be mentioned Professor A. A. Clark, superintendent of penmanship in the city schools. Mr. Clark is a refined and pleasing gentleman, and is one of the most prominent penmen of the country. Professor S. E. Barrow of the Ohio Business University, while but a young man, deserves to be ranked with the very best talent in the calling. Professors H. T. Loomis, J. H.

For the Boys to Read.

AN HOUR WITH OUR LETTERS.

Some very strongly executed and attractive specimens of penmanistic handwork are sent us by our substantial and highly esteemed friend, Professor J. B. Duryea, teacher of penmanship in the Iowa Business College, of Des Moines.

Professor C. L. Ricketts, artist penman, who is located at the Central Music Hall, Chicago, writes us an exceedingly clever letter—clever in a three-ply sense. The penmanship is irreproachable, the sentiment and composition excellent, and the remittance exceedingly refreshing.

Mr. M. T. Nelson of Pelican Rapids, Minnesota, is a young penman of much promise.

Mr. Guy L. Dail, Osawkee, Kansas, writes a pretty back hand. He is one of the many amateurs who has convinced us of his appreciation of the HERALD by promptly subscribing for it.

Professor J. F. Burner, Elko, Nevada, has mailed us some valuable specimens of gold and silver ore, which are on exhibition in the HERALD office.

Mr. Ralph W. Wood, who lives in the City of New York, has recently favored us with some very finely written and sensible business letters.

One of the most finished business writers of our country is Mr. Ira R. Harris, who holds a position with Catlin & Co., of Boston.

Mr. George L. Clothier, Paxico, Kansas, a former student of the world-known Gem

City Business College, Quincy, Illinois, and now a teacher in the public schools, writes well, and is a progressive and, we presume, a successful instructor.

Professor G. L. Gordon, Farmersville, Texas, who is well known in penmanship circles, visits us quite often, through the medium of excellently written letters. A specimen of his work will appear in an early number of our paper.

Professor W. N. Ferris, Big Rapids, Michigan, manifests his good will in the usual way, and utters a cheering word at the same time. He is one of our most prominent practical educators.

Mr. E. F. Quintal, late of Hillsdale, Michigan, is now at his home in Stockholm, New York. His writing possesses that peculiar grace which pupils of Palmer almost invariably acquire.

Mr. E. O. Hodson, Burr Oak, Kansas, is becoming quite a good penman. He belongs to our growing family.

People who imagine that the chief thing for which E. K. Isaacs is noted is his ability as a contributor to our periodicals, or his well known power as an instructor, are mistaken. We have before us a specimen of his writing which cannot be surpassed by half a dozen of the leaders of our calling.

A skillfully written set of capitals and a soulful letter come to us from that sterling young penman, Professor E. M. Barber, instructor in the Southwestern Business College, Wichita, Kansas.

Mr. E. N. Hill, North Wilbraham, Massachusetts, a young gentleman of sixteen years, sends us some dashing specimens. His work is very smooth, and has an pleasing appearance.

Mr. W. H. Lothrop, South Boston, Mass., sachussets, is a great lover of penmanship. Although a business man, he writes a style that would do honor to the majority of our professionals.

Professor C. E. Jones of Tabor, Iowa, does excellent work in all departments of penmanship, but his specialty is automatic—in which he has few equals. He is an earnest, intelligent and capable worker, and is deserving of all success.

wishes of Professor S. R. Webster, of Geneva, Ohio, were enclosed.

One of Canada's best penmen is Mr. Charles Ruby, of Waterloo, Ontario, who is a late recruit from the Queen's provinces.

Professor E. M. Worthington, Chicago, Illinois, informs us that the publication of the abandoned Pen and Ink Journal will soon be resumed. We are glad of it, and trust that it will shine with added brightness.

We receive few letters from any source that compare with those of Professor C. E. McKee, Columbus, Ohio. We expect to allow our readers to gaze upon his young features before long.

The Oberlin College Department of Penmanship has produced scores of elegant penman, but on the entire list no name can be found that will outshine that of our old class-mate and friend, Professor B. H. Spencer, now of Albany, New York. Some cards lately sent us are written in a style which is not encountered every day. We are glad to announce that in our next

The Western Penman for October, while somewhat delayed, is a bright and spicy number. In it is begun the promised series of lessons from the pen of Professor H. W. Kibbe. The "Penman" is one of the best periodicals published in the interests of education.

The Normal, Wilton Junction, Iowa, is full of substantial matter for teachers.

The Beacon, York, Nebraska, is pretty and good—two qualities which all periodicals should possess.

The College Review, Atchinson, Kansas, published by the students of the Business College of that city, contains much edifying and palatable editorial thought.

Professor E. M. Chartier, Little Rock, Arkansas, favors us with a specimen of his off-hand writing in imitation of Wiesenhahn. It is very deftly done.

Professor Fielding Schofield, who presides over that miniature pen-art world of Quincy, Illinois, the Normal Penmanship Department of the Gem City College, sends us a packet of flourishing, which, for ingenuity of design, grace of execution and artistic beauty, we have never seen equaled.

Professor C. A. Faust, Chicago, hands us a sample of his back-hand, in the form of a complimentary letter, which is fully up to his standard of excellence—which means something, we can assure you.

Professor J. D. Brunner, Marble Rock, Iowa, is coolly walking in to prominence as a teacher of penmanship.

Our old friend, C. G. Prince, now of Buffalo, New York, writes us a letter in a style that is captivating. He encloses a specimen of his poetic genius, which, we have no doubt, will prove soothing to many a worldly penman, as it expresses no imaginary sentiment. We present it in its unrevised entirety.

Leaves of penmen oft remind us,
Not for us the proud world cares,
So we, departing, leave behind us,
Little hostile for our brins.

We are wondering what can have become of our old associate, W. E. Dennis. We fear that the muscular movement advocates have finished him. When we last saw him he wore an over-dome cast of countenance and a new pair of cuffs, the former, especially, having been induced by too much of the movement theory. To indulge in candor, we must say that few men in the pen-art ranks have equal talents.

The November number of Gaskell's Magazine contains a portrait and sketch of the HERALD's editor. We already hear expressions of surprise at our extreme youthfulness as disclosed by our charitable friend, Mr. Scarborough.

This design is photo-engraved from a flourish originally executed by that well-known teacher of writing, Prof. J. B. Duryea, Penman in the Iowa Business College, an old and prosperous institution of Des Moines, Iowa.

Mr. H. M. Cash of Salesville, Ohio, one of the veteran writing teachers of the country, favors us with a well written and inspiring letter.

Most people seem to understand that Professor H. W. Flickinger of Philadelphia, is a good writer. If any are in doubt we believe that a recent letter which we have received from that gentleman will settle the matter.

Some of the most artistic and thoroughly good specimens of pen-work which have ever crossed our pathway, have just been sent us by that warm hearted and jovial southerner, Professor R. S. Collins of Knoxville, Tennessee.

Among the skilled and accomplished writers of the profession, Professor W. A. Hoffman, teacher in Bryant's College, Chicago, holds a high position. In a late letter he expresses thorough appreciation of the HERALD.

Among the many valued letters that have come to us since our last issue, none are more deftly and delicately written than that in which the congratulations and best issue Professor Spencer will give a lesson in writing, and it is needless to predict that a rare treat will be enjoyed by all who see that number.

Mr. Jesse Overlock, Rockport, Maine, uses a model species of penmanship in his letter-writing.

Mr. E. L. Brown, Rockport, Maine, sends us some pieces of pen-work which are well executed, and exhibit good taste in their designing.

Mr. J. V. DeCremier, Green Bay, Wisconsin, uses the pen in a playful fashion, and produces graceful and brilliant strokes. He is but fifteen years of age.

A beautiful piece of copper-plate letter-writing is sent us by Professor J. F. White-leather, principal of the Business College at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

ABOUT OUR NEIGHBORS.

The Penman's Directory by W. H. Gardner, Salem, Massachusetts, has some interesting and enjoyable features. The last number contains a bright contribution from our friend, F. S. Heath of Portland, Me.

In the School Room.

A LESSON IN WRITING WITHOUT COPIES.

BY WILL DEKALD SHOWALTER.

Frankness should characterize the utterances of every honest instructor. The teacher who possesses a fault which is apparent to every pupil under his charge, and yet remains conveniently blind to it himself, only renders the failing ten-fold more objectionable. Acting on this thought, I wish to make a plain statement in regard to the young man whose partial cognomen heads this article. In class, I am apt to talk too much! But to help atone for this failing, I must add that I never begin my verbal athletics until I have the attention of every student in the class. I find it necessary to resort to various expedients to get that attention, but it pays to secure it at any cost.

But I am losing myself in the intoxication of rambling talk again, almost forgetting that this is labeled a "Lesson." I notice you are getting ready to practice. But I must indulge my confessed failing again long enough to remark about the territory the class occupies! You are scattered in every remote corner of the map. Intelligent faces are turned toward this paragraph in every state and territory. Are you growing restless? Are you impatient to commence practice? Hold; you are not yet ready. Will you please discard a tendency, which I cannot help noting, to crouch, shall I call it? I mean that some are stooping and bending and inclining forward too much. There is an unnatural droop about your heads. Did anyone ever advise you to sit erect? If so, regard that individual as a sage, and take the advice.

Be sure, also, that your paper and pens are good. I'll not prescribe any special brand of either. Try all of the different kinds and select the best. Now, criticize your manner of holding the pen and resting the arms. If, by endeavoring to recall all you have ever read in regard to pen-holding and movement, you feel that you would be profited by making some changes in your methods, do not hesitate to do so. Are you now ready to write? Let us reflect. We have tried to put the physical part of the machinery, which produces good writing, in proper running order. What else is required? Is writing a mere physical education? If so, of what use is the brain? Will the most careful attention to the details of the mechanical parts of an engine avail ought unless there is a  motive power for propelling and directing and holding in check those physical or mechanical appliances?

The human body is but a convertible machine, capable of being made subservient to an endless variety of uses, when mind acts through it. Rubbed of the regulating and controlling mental force, it becomes the most useless of all machines.

And now, young friends and old friends, if I can persuade you to realize that the most important factor for consideration in drilling and training the causes and conditions which produce fine penmanship, is now, and ever will be, MIND—I shall consider that our copyless lesson has not been a profitless one.

SEND US YOUR ideas for publication.

THROUGH THE HERALD'S TELESCOPE.

The Archibald Business College of Minneapolis, in which our worthy friend, Professor H. J. Putman, is an important faculty factor, is represented by a tastefully made up catalogue.

Professor C. N. Crandle is meeting with that success which can be looked upon as only the natural fruit of honest labor, in his penmanship teaching at the Dixon Normal School of Illinois.

Our intimate friend and former pupil, Mr. Flave E. Ashburn, West Union, West Virginia, contemplates entering the profession of penmanship and business education at an early day. He is coming right to the front in his writing, and in addition to possessing a fine education, has decided and marked talent as a teacher. From the fact that young men of his stamp are needed in our calling, we feel assured of his success.

Mr. John Nolen, Philadelphia, a graduate of the famous Girard College of that city, has determined to become a better penman, although he now writes a splendid business hand. Mr. Nolen's resolve in this direction is worthy of a wide emulation. There ought to be ten thousand more good writers in this country before another year passes.

The above features are said to be synonymous with those worn on ordinary occasions by

W. D. SHOWALTER.

We might add that Mr. Nolen had the misfortune to be our room-mate during a part of our stay in the "Quaker City," and that it would be a difficult matter to convince us that the last census reports include a half dozen other young men of equally good qualities and attainments.

FRIENDS!

Is there not someone in the circle of your acquaintance who would readily subscribe for the HERALD after reading our premium offers? If so, and you will secure and send to us his subscription, we will mail you, in order to show our appreciation, a copy of FARLEY'S MODEL GUIDE TO PENMANSHIP, a work of great value to all classes. May we not expect numerous responses to this proposition?

ABOUT as fine pieces of ornamental penmanship as we have ever enjoyed looking at have just been received from the famed pen-artist, Professor D. H. Farley, Trenton, New Jersey. They are christened "Chirographic Editors" and "Pen-Strokes," and are advertised in this month's paper. Framed, they would adorn and honor any art collection in the land. An elaborate specimen of Professor Farley's work will be engraved for an early issue of this paper.

Mr. Will J. Hudson, the Columbus "Short-hand and Type-writer man," is one of the aggressive and progressive of our many esteemed co-workers. He is a prominent Business College man; a rushing and extremely vivacious dealer in all sorts of office conveniences, and is a decided success as an editor, conducting, in an able manner, one of the most valuable and interesting of periodicals—The Modern Office. Mr. Hudson is one of the few men of any calling who can do a number of things at the same time and do all of them in a thoroughly thorough and successful manner.

The Writing Teacher, published by our friend Williamson of Richmond, Virginia, does not come often enough. It is full of concentrated brightness, and its perusal will make the sourest person in the world feel like a man. We heartily wish that every state had a penmanship quarterly of as much merit.

exchanges. The West Union Record, of which our old friend, Sias P. Smith, is editor, runs an Educational Department. We once had the honor of overseeing and conducting that portion of the periodical, and, of course, feel an interest in its welfare. The Educational Leader, published by C. J. Oller of Findlay, Ohio, is a welcome visitor to our editorial cave. The same remark may apply to The Journal of Education, of which O. P. Judd of Clinton, Iowa, is editor. The Modern Office, Columbus, Ohio, is one of the most valuable periodicals which comes to this, or any other office.

A CAREFUL examination of Wright's "Bookkeeping Simplified; or a Key to Double Entry," an attractive and hand-somely bound copy of which is on our table, convinces us that as a text or reference book on the subject of which it treats, it is especially desirable and valuable. The work does not pretend to deal with theories in an elaborate manner, but gives the substance of the author's actual experience as an accountant. It is full of good, sound, choice and spicy matter relating to the every-day work of the bookkeeper. We call special attention to the advertisement found in this issue and feel that we are doing our readers a favor by urging them to procure a copy of the work without delay.

We have felt uneasy ever since dropping the somewhat irrelevant closing sentence in our review of the PACKARD ARITHMETIC, which appeared in our last number. The truth of the matter is, we had examined and used an older edition of the work, and felt perfectly safe and justified in saying what we did of it. But of the revised and later edition, Professor Packard had not, as then, mailed us a copy, yet had remarked in one of his letters that he would not object to our reviewing it. We took it and used it as a mere bit of witicism, and, as our readers are aware, and as the professor puts it, "kicked over a good pail of milk" in a sort of reckless closing remark. Were it not that it is fast becoming a habit of ours to say things in a way that conservative people condemn, we should feel it our duty to apologize.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS OF THE "EXPONENT."

About three months ago I decided to sell the Exponent and publish a monthly college paper. I was corresponding with several parties about it. Mr. Bennett of Grand Rapids, Mich., learned of this, seemed very anxious to have the Exponent and made me a proposition, stating that he could not take it then, but would the first of October. I told him I could not publish it any more, as I had started the College Journal, and would not have time to attend to both. But I told him I would keep it for him until October, and sent him a contract to sign. He made out and signed one of his own and returned it. I kept the Exponent, as agreed upon, but he refused to pay for it. So I have arranged with Mr. Showalter, editor of the HERALD, to fill the subscriptions. I am sure none of you can have any fault to find regarding the change, if Mr. Showalter continues to give us the bright thoughts and beautiful cuts he has done thus far. Cordially, S. D. FORBES.

ALTOONA, PA., NOV. 14, 1887.

The Automatic Shading Pen

TWO COLORS AT A SINGLE STROKE.

THREE SIZES BY MAIL $1.00.

SAMPLE WRITING FREE.

J. W. STOKES, MILAN, O.

Successful Because it is Practical.

Clinton Business College

AND SCHOOL OF

Penmanship, Shorthand, Type-Writing.

Each of its departments is under the charge of a skilled expert.

An efficient corps of experienced teachers. A good location. A thorough and practical course of study. Pleasant rooms. Convenient furniture. Its principals are practical accountants and successful teachers. CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED. For Circulars, address O. P. JUDD, President, Clinton, IOWA.

C. E. JONES

LESSONS BY MAIL.

—IN—

Automatic Penmanship.

This is no experiment. Success is certain to every one taking lessons with a willingness to learn. No student has failed yet, and I have had hundreds.

To my knowledge, no one else teaches Automatic Penmanship by mail.

The course is systematically arranged as far as possible, but the lessons must be varied in every case to suit the particular needs of each student.

This is one of the most beautiful kinds of pen work and is within the reach of everyone, certain, who will take 21 lessons.

Some have done beautiful work after six lessons. All copies are fresh from my pen.

PRICES.

12 Lessons .....	$1.00
24 Lessons .....	50
Alphabets, each .....	15
1 Handwriting Model, size 7x20 letters and ornamented in a variety of colors .....	25
5 Automatic Shading Pens (assorted) .....	1.00
5 assorted powders for making ink for same .....	1.00
12 Ornamented designs .....	1.00
Cards, per doz. ....	30

Address,

PROF. C. E. JONES,
TABOR, IOWA

TESTIMONIALS.

Jones is one of the very finest Automatic pen artists.

The Western Penman.

The art of lettering with an automatic pen has been reduced to a fine point by C. E. Jones, Principal of the Business Department of the Tabor, Iowa College. That he has also the faculty of imparting skill to others is attested by numerous specimens of the work of his students, which we have been permitted to see.

The Penman's Art Journal.

Specimens of automatic pen-lettering received from Mr. Jones are the finest we have ever noticed.

Ed. PEN ART HERALD.

WANTED!

Every one who sees this send for FREE CIRCULAR OF

LESSONS BY MAIL

—IN—

Automatic Penmanship.

Automatic Shading Pens, 25c. each.

Fine Assorted Sizes, $1.00.

Five Packages Assorted Automatic Ink Powders, 25c.

Beautiful Specimens of Automatic Penwork, 10c.

A. H. BARBOUR,

Lock Box 34, TABOR, IOWA.

DON'T FORGET TO READ
OUR PREMIUM OFFERS ON SEVENTH PAGE.

A SERIES OF LESSONS IN

Plain Writing

By H. J. PUTMAN and W. J. KINSLEY.

A New Work. New Plan. Admirably Arranged. Elegantly Engraved. Finest of Heavy Paper. Best of Printing.

Half the Usual Price.

PRICE, FIFTY CENTS.

The copies are elegantly engraved on copper, printed from stone on the finest kind of very heavy plate paper. All copies new; no reshash. There are two parts:

PART ONE.

Part I contains seventeen slips. These slips are not bound and are all devoted to plain writing. There are two slips devoted to movement exercises, giving fifty-five different exercises. The small letters are given in the order in which they should be taught.

A great variety of words, introducing nothing but small letters. The finest set of plain capitals ever given. Following the letter given for practice, comes a short word introducing the capital, followed by a short sentence, starting with the same capital.

The figures are analyzed by means of staff lines, and a great variety of commercial abbreviations given. Forms of draft, receipt and letter are prominent features. One slip of solid vertical writing is given.

PART TWO.

Part 2 is the "Instruction Book" to accompany the slips. This is the most complete ever given in connection with a work of this kind.

It contains chapters on "Materials," "Position" (giving cuts), "Form," "Movement," and "General Information." There are twenty lessons mapped out.

The slips and "Instruction Book" are enclosed in a neat and substantial case. The reader may think from the generous use of the adjectives in this advertisement that we have been employed to write up "ads" for Barrum's Circles, but you will find below a few opinions from prominent penmen and educators, and the best of it is we have more of them. Watch the different penmanship papers and you will see some of the others.

TESTIMONIALS.

PROF. W. D. SNOWWATER, Editor "Pen Art Herald," Cleveland, O.—I consider "A Series of Lessons in Plain Writing" the most comprehensive, clear and practical guide for the student of penmanship now before the public. The authors have exhibited in its admirable arrangement and thoughtful make-up, a superior comprehension of the actual requirements of the class-room, as well as a complete conversance with the needs of the self-teaching student.

PROF. F. A. HOWARD, Prin. Conn. Coll., Rockford, Me.—Having thoroughly examined your "Series of Lessons in Plain Writing," I take pleasure in recommending them in every student of penmanship. PROF. W. N. FERRIS, Prin. Big Rapids (Mich.) Industrial School—I shall say a good word for your "Lessons." You deserve to reap a rich reward, and of the people can learn the existence of your "Lessons" you will reap it.

Agents wanted in every town and county. A liberal discount given. Money can be made selling the "Lessons." Collect all other "Compendiums" on writing, send for a copy of the "Lessons," and compare. One can be ordered in this manner, and it will prevent defrauding the remaining people who want copies. If this work is not better arranged, has not a better quality of work, printing, paper, etc., and does not give more for the money than any similar thing published, we will refund the money and pay postage for return, providing that it is returned in good condition.

Price, FIFTY CENTS. Stamps not taken.

Address either of the places named below that is nearest to you.

PUTMAN & KINSLEY.

P. O. Box 186, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

P. O. Box 787, SHENANDOAH, IOWA.

A SET OF

Flourished

CAPITALS,

20 cents.

TWO SETS.

one Flourished,

one Plain, 35 cents.

To introduce my work to the readers of the P. A. H., I will write cards for the coming month at the following low rates:

Plain White ..... 15 cents per doz.
Plain Gold ..... 20
Gilt or Plain Level ..... 25

All orders filled promptly and sent postpaid.

D. B. HANSON,
Columbus Business College,
COLUMBUS, O.

The wonderful progress which has been made during the last few years in METHODS OF IMPARTING A THOROUGH

Business Education

is strikingly illustrated in the practical workings and in the assured success of the

Ohio Business University

—AND—

National School of Penmanship,
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

This institution furnishes unequalled facilities for learning penmanship and the art of teaching it. It has in its faculty five experienced penmen, one of whom devotes his time to teaching engraving and ornamental work. The others make a specialty of Business Penmanship. Ornamental and Business Penmanship are considered and treated as entirely separate branches. One as an art and an indispensable part of a business education. Our facilities for imparting a complete business education are fully up with the times, and we invite a thorough investigation of the same. Circulars free

W. J. Kinsley

562 Pearl St., Cleveland, O.

President and Proprietor

SPECIAL.

CARDS—Good quality (for a short time only). 15 cents per dozen; 25 for only 25 cents.

FLOURISHING.

PRICES—$2.10, 25 cents, or 2 for 30 cents. Larger, prices 25, 30, 75c., and $1.00.

ENGROSSING.

Engraving and display work of every description to suit customers. I make a specialty of this kind of work. My work is first-class, and prices reasonable.

A. E. DEWHURST, UTICA, N. Y.

FOR SALE.

Business College and School of Shorthand & Type-writing in Akron, Ohio.

Good patronage. Other business the reason for selling. Address for particulars,

P. HAMMEL.

G. J. KRETCHMER,

PEN-ART HERALD OFFICE,

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

One of the rising young penmen of the country, for the quality of whose work, both plain and ornamental, the editor of the HERALD will unhesitatingly vouch, desires to hear from every one who receives this number, and for 10c., silver or stamps, will send specimens of his very best work.

"Pen Strokes"

IS FARLEY'S LATEST & BEST.

All who order the "GUIDE" within 30 days will receive a copy of "PEN STROKES" free.

REVISED. IMPROVED. ENLARGED.

THE MODEL

Guide to Penmanship

With Copy Slips on a New Plan.

Price of "Guide," 25c.; "Pen Strokes," 15c.; "Calligraphic Exercises," 10c.; Prize Specimens, 10c.; Ornamental Specimens from the pen, 25c. When all are ordered at once, 75c. Address,

W. J. Kinsley

TRENTON, N.J.

515 East State Street.

A Pair of SPONTANEOUS STATEMENTS

PEN-ART HERALD OFFICE,

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16, 1887.

Considerable of reliable hearsay and somewhat extended personal investigation in regard to the work which the various Schools of Penmanship have been and are now doing, compel me to affirm that, in my estimation, the Pen-Art headquarters of the world are at Oberlin, Ohio. I experience a pardonable pride in referring to the fact that I am one of the numerous workers whose schooling was obtained under the tuition of Prof. U. McKee, the Commander-in-Chief of Oberlin's pen forces. W. D. SNOWWATER, Editor.

PENMANSHIP DEPARTMENT,

OHIO BUSINESS UNIVERSITY,

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16, '87.

I take much pleasure in voluntarily asserting that for my success as a teacher of penmanship, I am largely indebted to my talented instructor in that art, Prof. U. McKee, Oberlin, O. I received the school over which he presides as one of the very best in the country for preparing young men and women for the profession of penmanship. S. E. BARLOW, Principal.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE PEN-ART HERALD.

Vol. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER, 1887.

No. 4.

A TALK WITH PROFESSOR W. J. KINSLEY.

HOW A SUCCESSFUL TEACHER OF PENMANSHIP SECURES SUCCESSFUL RESULTS IN SCHOOL-ROOM WORK.

"I suppose, Mr Kinsley, that you will not object to answering some pointed questions in regard to your methods of teaching writing?"

"Oh, no sir. If by so doing I can contribute to the general fund of teaching experience which the HERALD has started, I shall be glad to talk to you."

in addition to giving them the benefit of the general exercises."

"To what extent do you think it advisable to give personal instruction?"

"My plan is to arrange my class instruction so that it will cover as large a field as possible, and to give that first. The remaining portion of the time I spend in personally examining the work of each student, which I do systematically, and with expedition, so that a large number may be carefully attended to in a short time. If I find a particular fault in the work of some one student which is not general, I point it out and suggest a

"I cannot say that I use any method which is especially new. Of course, having charge of three hundred penmanship students daily, I get a good point occasionally. I try to get the student in a good position first of all, and then follow in every direction, without a pen in hand. Then I try the dry pen exercise making tracing ovals without ink on the pen and follow with running oval. The first few lessons are spent in obtaining the best position possible and developing movement, and the remaining lessons in obtaining control over the movement. The best

"Will you name some of your pupils of whose proficiency you are especially proud?"

"G. W. Wallace, who graduated from our special penmanship department last July, and who is now penman and secretary of the Wilmington, Delaware, Commercial College, a young man of nineteen years, I consider the finest all-round penman of his age in this country. There are not three professionals of any age who can excel his flourishing. His writing is strong and bold and quite accurate. F. L. Ellett, Red Oak, Iowa, and D. D. Darby, of Northboro, Iowa, are good penmen, and

The above is photo-engraved from the pen and ink copy of PROF. H. J. PIERCE, Minneapolis, Minn

"That's liberal. Thank you. Do you use pen and ink, blackboard or engraved copies in your classes?"

"In class-drill I use both blackboard and engraved copies. I write the copy on the board and analyze it to the best of my ability. Each student is provided with a package of slips and the engraved copy is kept directly in front of him. I also use the board to illustrate and explain the faults which seem to be common in the class, and to show how they may be corrected. For special penmanship students—those who receive private or individual instruction—I write all copies on paper, remedy; but I do not believe, as a rule, in consuming time by giving personal instruction when the same thing is needed by the class."

"Do you teach movement exclusively?"

"Yes, I rarely mention any other movement before a class. I find it necessary, however, to direct a great many as to how to get along without the finger and whole-arm movements. In the Special Penmanship Department a different plan is pursued, as I have a better control of the student there."

"Have you any special methods of teaching the muscular?"

thing that I can find to give a beginner an idea of what is meant by muscular movement is to place my left hand on his forearm, just forward of the elbow, and hold his hand in position by means of my right hand, while making some very simple tracing exercise. I find this to be better than an hour's talking."

"Do you have trouble with lady pupils on account of tight sleeves?"

"Yes, I usually have a little trouble at the beginning of a term, but I speak plainly about the matter, condemning tight sleeves, bracelets, cuffs, wristlets or other paraphernalia with which it is fashionable to encumber the arm."

are following an itinerant's life now. H. H. Kellogg, penman in the Anoka, Minnesota, Business College, is a successful teacher. J. M. Davis has charge of the Commercial and Penmanship departments of the Nebraska Normal school, Madison, Nebraska, and J. C. Nelson is in Omaha, Nebraska. I have hundreds of pupils engaged in teaching in the public schools, who, although they do not follow penmanship as a profession, are fine writers."

"Have any of your lady pupils ever become skilled penmen?"

"No, but I have succeeded in turning out some very fair writers of the opposite sex. Yet with the same amount of effort on my part, and, apparently due effort on theirs, I can produce fifty good writers among the boys where I can produce one among the ladies—I mean excellent writers. Nearly one-half of my three hundred writing pupils are ladies."

CHARLES EUGENE MCKEE,

The cultured and competent instructor in Penmanship, Commercial branches and Shorthand at The MODERN OFFICE TRAINING COLLEGE, Columbus, was born at Warren, Ohio, November 11, 1866.

His boyhood was spent upon his father's farm. Nature, however, did not intend that he should remain a tiller of the soil, in the literal meaning of the words—but that he should, at a sufficiently mature age, become a laborer in the vineyard of mind, and should cultivate intellekti, instead of corn and beans. We doubt not that he was a success in his boyhood vacation, as he has been a marked one in the higher vineyard—there being much in common with the farmer and teacher. The one deals with, principally, inanimate matter, and the other with the animate and mental—both endeavoring to induce healthy and substantial growth and development; both trying to remove obstacles which prevent proper expansion and cultivation of existing and primary germs. Because of this co-relation of professions, we account for the fact that the best teachers come from the farm.

Mr. McKee's taste for penmanship was manifested at an early age. His first lessons in writing were given him by S. P. Benjamin, an itinerant teacher. Of him our subject purchased a copy of Mussel-

Normal School at Canfield, pursuing the "common branches," with a view to teaching. In this school all students were entitled to an hour's penmanship instruction, free of charge, twice a week. The class was under the charge of J. B. Say, turbulent sea of doubt, unable to return to the starting point, and with little hope of reaching a peaceful haven beyond. This is an experience with which all learners are acquainted, however, and which usually precedes the dawn of a district school. During this time he gained his first experience as a teacher of writing. He had engaged for the second term, but receiving an offer of the position of assistant teacher of penmanship at the Normal, he resigned, and, during the four weeks intervening, drank from the "Fountain of Pen-art," the Oberlin College Department of Penmanship.

The following year was spent as assistant penman in the Normal, in connection with pursuing a full commercial course successfully. At the end of the year he was chosen to represent his class in commencement exercises. By this time he had acquired a considerable knowledge of teaching and of our profession, and was a subscriber to all of our penmanship papers. He now assumed entire charge of the penmanship, in both the Normal and the public schools of Canfield. At the close of the year he was earnestly sought to remain, but desiring to labor in a larger field, accepted his present position in Columbus, which he is filling with honor to himself and satisfaction to all.

C. E. McKee is one of the brightest of the new stars in our calling. In executive ability he has few equals among our best professionals; and as a teacher and man he is liberal, progressive and accomplished. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and for his success in life—for he is a success—he gives his mother the credit. Always anxious to encourage him and to stimulate him to nobler actions, her influence upon his life cannot fail to be apparent to all.

INCIDENTAL ITEMS.

H. P. Behrensmeier will attend the Cedar Rapids convention.

This very beautiful and elaborate specimen is given in connection with the article on another page, by Prof. E. K. Isaacs, Valparaiso, Ind.

man's Compendium, which constituted his only guide for a considerable time thereafter. At the age of fourteen he designed and executed a small piece of pen-drawing which was awarded first premium at the county fair. It is useless to add that this early pen triumph acted as an incentive to continued effort; and in the fall of 1883 he entered the Northeastern Ohio who required that the muscular and no other movement should be operated. This proved a serious matter for our young friend, as he had not been accustomed to anything of that sort. His muscles were wild and reckless and would not confine their wanderings to proper limits. One week in this class made of him—apparently—a chirographic wreck, floating in a bright muscular movement morning. Being of an experimental turn of mind, Mr. McKee kept working at odd moments, until he succeeded in naturalizing his muscles to such an extent that practice became a pleasure, and he was often astonished at his own work. After two terms of schooling at the Normal, he taught, at the age of seventeen, his first

E. M. Chartier will open the Texas Business College and Institute of Penmanship at Paris, about January 1st.

G. B. Jones conducts a successful writing academy in Wilder's Arcade, Rochester.

J. W. Stoakes, Milan, Ohio, does fine automatic pen-lettering, and is the leading dealer in those instruments.

REPORT SPECIAL COMMITTEE MINNEAPOLIS BOARD OF TRADE

beg leave to state briefly their conclusions of the system and a knowledge of the

Our Committee

sions based upon a careful examination of the work that is being accomplished by the

CURRISS COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

The course of instruction seems to be singularly complete, comprehensive, and sible practical and effective under the thorough system inaugurated by

AND THE FACT THAT ALL

PROFITABLE

WORTHY GRADUATES FIND

EMPLOYMENT

awaiting them is sufficient evidence dence of the merit of such an stitution as the

Curriess College of Minneapolis

City of Minneapolis

TO THE COMMITTEE FROM

THE CITY OF MINNEAPOLIS

CONGRATULATING

recommends the adoption of the following resolutions.

of the following resolutions.

BOARD OF TRADE

CURRISS

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

an institution of high reputation,

sterling merit and great usefulness to the business community of the Northwest.

SECOND

that in its methods, management and results it strongly commends itself to the entire business community in which it has grown up and with which it is so honorably identified.

COMMUNIQUE

Geo. R. Pillsbury, Pres., C. C. Sturtevant, Sec.
David Blakely, R. B. Nettleton, Robert Hale,
William Pettit, Richard Chute.

W. H. HARRIS & SONS

The Pen-Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature.

Subscription price, Seventy-five cents per year. Single numbers, Ten cents each.

See our Premium Offers on page 7. We do not send stamps when postal note can be obtained.

Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 inch, 1 month,	$2.	3 months,	$5.
1 year,	$12
3 col., 1 "	4 "	3 "	10 "
1 "	12 "	3 "	30 "
1 "	30 "	1 "	60 "
1 "	60 "	1 "	100 "

CLAR RATES:
 $10 to 10, Sixty-five cents each.
 10 to 25, Sixty cents each.
 25 to 50, Rates made known on application.
 These rates include the "Alphabets" as premium.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every business or other kind of live school in the land, to act as our representative, and to solicit subscriptions and advertisements for the HERALD. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 556 PEARL STREET.
W. D. SHOWALTER,
 Editor and Publisher
 Entered at the Post Office, at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class mail matter.

YULE-TIDE FANCIES.

In the early days of business college history it was customary to advertise to teach a certain "System" of writing—but that custom has become nearly obsolete. Is it pertinent to ask ourselves the cause of this state of desuetude? Does it argue that our professionals no longer entertain any regard for system in their teaching? Is it an indication of progress or retrogression?

We are inclined to believe that this state of things is in perfect keeping with the general advancement in methods and ideas which has characterized the last few years of our work. Teachers are doing their own thinking, and are coming to investigate for themselves as to the most practical ways of attaining success in the writing class. To admit that a "system" is taught, would be equivalent to acknowledging that, because of a lack of ideas of our own, we have adopted the ideas of some author who has probably had no actual teaching experience at all. System is not only commendable, but necessary; a standard of form and idea is, likewise, a necessity; but to utilize the opinions and productions of someone else, without proper investigation as to their merits or adaptability to our own purposes, is to make of ourselves teaching machines, instead of brain-endowed, living and capable instructors. * * *

When Business Training schools were established, COMMERCE became one of the PROFESSIONS. Reflecting on this fact, should we not occasionally compare the relation of Commercial Colleges to the profession of BUSINESS, with that of other schools to the calling for which they train our youth? Is there not some doubt in your mind as to whether the Business school is the recognized channel of preparation for the requirements of actual life? Is it so regarded by business men? In order to remove the serious and, to some degree, just complaints against our present system, it is necessary for teachers to breathe the air of actuality and to strip their courses of study of everything which has not an important relation to the work of the business office. While business men cannot always be teachers, teachers should always be thorough business men.

A correspondent suggests that there is a "marked difference between mere plain writing and practical writing." This difference comes, doubtless, from the commendable—but overdone—efforts of some authors to simplify forms of letters in business writing. These abbreviations, while diminishing the number of strokes in a letter, do not preserve the individuality of the forms to such an extent that they may be rapidly made and still retain their legibility—without which all writing is worthless.

Rivalry in business college work seems to be peculiarly productive of jealousy and back-biting, if we are to judge from a num-month, we are pleased to present in full, as below, a copy of the

PROGRAMME

OF THE

WESTERN PENMEN'S ASSOCIATION,
 At Cedar Rapids, Iowa, beginning Monday,
 Dec. 26, 1897, and lasting five days.

MONDAY.

Organization and report of Secretary and Treasurer.
 R. M.—ADDRESS OF WELCOME.—(To be supplied.)
 Response by C. S. Chapman, President.
 Reception and Sociable.

TUESDAY.

8:30 to 9:30 A. M.
 Discussion—How much time in each lesson in penmanship should be devoted to movement exercises?
 Opened by I. W. Pearson, followed by the members.

9:30 to 10:30 A. M.

Speed in class drills in word and sentence writing, by A. N. Palmer.

10:30 to 11:30 A. M.

Lesson to beginners in a business college, George R. Rathbun.

11:30 to 12 A. M.

Miscellaneous.
 2 to 3 P. M.
 Discussion—Should whole-arm movement be taught in a business college?
 Opened by B. C. Wood, followed by the members.

Combined movement. W. J. Kinsley.
 11:30 to 12 A. M.

Miscellaneous Topics.

2 to 3 P. M.

Muscular Movement. A. J. Scarborough.

3 to 4 P. M.

Penmanship in business colleges. G. W. Brown.

4 to 5 P. M.

Drills in business writing. E. H. Robbins.

Evening.

Address—Illustrated.
 Forged and Disguised Writing. D. T. Ames.

8:30 to 9:30 P. M.

Flourishing. A. H. Hinman.

9:30 to 10 P. M.

Discussions.

FRIDAY.

8:30 to 9:30 A. M.

Lesson to advanced pupils. O. W. Hoff.

9:30 to 10:30 A. M.

What shall we do to raise the standard of penmanship in the public schools? W. N. Ferris.

10:30 to 11:30 A. M.

Abbreviated Capitals. C. N. Crandle.

Afternoon.

Election of officers and general business.

"SOMETHING FOR THE BOYS TO WORK AT."

BY E. K. ISAACS, VALPARAISO, IND.

THE ORIGINAL of the illustration on page two was executed some four years

Executed, originally, by PROF. S. J. FENIGER, the accomplished penman of Moore's Business University, Atlanta, Ga.

ber of instances brought to our notice. We cannot see why honorable competition should sever friendly or fraternal ties, but it rarely fails to do this. Teachers and educators, however, who are of sufficiently broad and liberal views to render them deserving of the titles, will not dishonor themselves or their calling by denouncing a brother as a rogue, ignoramus and general scoundrel, simply because he may operate a school in their own immediate territory. Such tactics do not serve to gain for anyone the favor of the intelligent, and are the means of lowering the status of the calling in the eyes of the disinterested.

A GATHERING OF SCRIBES.

REPRESENTATIVE TEACHERS FROM BOTH EAST AND WEST IN CONFERENCE.

About the time this issue of the HERALD reaches its readers, an important educational meeting will be about to convene out in Iowa. While the report of its proceedings must wait until next

3 to 4 P. M.
 Philosophy of movement. C. C. Curtis.
 4 to 5 P. M.
 Itinerant teachers: how should they organize and conduct classes? A general discussion to be opened by A. E. Parsons.

Evening—Entertainment

WEDNESDAY.

8:30 to 9:30 A. M.

Penmanship in county institutes. C. J. Conner.

9:30 to 10:30 A. M.

Speed in Figures. C. H. Porter.

10:30 to 11:30 A. M.

My method of teaching business penmanship.

A. H. Hinman.

11:30 to 12 A. M.

Miscellaneous topics.

2 to 3 P. M.

Musical as an adjunct in teaching movement. G. R. Rathbun.

3 to 4 P. M.

Business Writing. W. H. Whigam.

4 to 5 P. M.

Miscellaneous topics and discussions.

Evening.

An experience meeting.

THURSDAY.

8:30 to 9:30 A. M.

Application of movement to form.

9:30 to 10:30 A. M.

Methods of teaching large classes.

10:30 to 11:30 A. M.

ago, which explains the "greeting" on the card in the foreground. While some of the HERALD readers may have seen this piece of flourishing before, I am quite certain it will be new to a great majority, and in a response to a request from the editor to "give the boys something to work at for a month or two," I "give" this design with the earnest hope that the boys, and girls, too, may find something in it worthy of study and imitation.

The original was about three times the size of cut. It was photo-engraved—not hand-engraved.

At first sight the learner will probably exclaim: "O, that's too fine and complicated, I can never make that!" But do not be too hasty in your conclusions.

By more careful study you will observe a certain system pervading the whole, and when once you get anything systematized, it will appear simple to you.

Notice that the cluster of branches are arranged systematically, those extending toward the right having their complementary ones at the left. The learner may sketch in these branches with lead-pencil—that is, the stem or centre line of each branch may be sketched in lightly with pencil, in order to get the different branches located properly. Lay off your design twice the size of the copy, and by "twice the size" is meant twice the dimensions each way, making it really four times as large as original.

In all your flourishing, try to make the lines cross each other at right angles or nearly so. Owing to the multiplicity of lines in accompanying design, the critical eye may discover some exceptions to this rule; but in the main it has been carried out. Even the branches dropping downward or extending heavenward are seemingly cognizant of this rule, and "cross each other at right angles or nearly so."

I am somewhat curious to know how many strokes this design contains, but never had the time or patience to count them. I shall remunerate in some way any of the HERALD learners who may have the time and patience to count the strokes—excluding the stipple work and lettering—and who will report the same to me or through the HERALD.

I shall also be very much pleased to receive specimens from all who may feel that they are making a reasonable success of this design.

PEN-ART INSTRUCTION.

BY ANNA NINTIN, GRAND ISLAND NEB.

ARTICLE I.

We present the accompanying piece of pen drawing as a specimen of ornamental penmanship and believe that those of our readers who feel disposed to try copying it will find as easy a design as they have ever attempted to execute.

No one is prepared to begin the study of ornamental penmanship, however, without first supplying himself with a set of drawing instruments. These may be had at any book store.

In making an elaborate piece of pen-work, the part on which you are most uncertain should be made first. That is, if you desire to execute a piece of work containing both pen drawing and flourishing, you should, so far as possible, make the flourish first, for the reason that in making rapid flourishes you are much more unlikely to get your best work.

In this design make the large circle first with a pencil. Next make the flourishes on the sides and in case you fail to get them as exact as you desire, but little work is lost by taking a new sheet and commencing again.

Next pencil out the pallet and brushes carefully. If you have not a paste board pallet of proper size to get the outline from, you can trace the one given in the design on this paper.

Shade the brushes and branches next taking special care with all the details. The last thing done should be to trace the outline of the pallet with a pen.

One of the greatest difficulties with beginners is to stop when they have finished a design. The secret of success in producing first class ornamental penwork lies largely in getting an artistic appearance with as few strokes as possible.

NO SHADE.

BY J. B. DURYEA.

Article on first page of October number of HERALD, entitled, "Teaching Business Writing," has been eagerly read by me.

If you were preparing a young man for a district school teacher, would you compel him to spend most of his time trying to get a little Greek? If you were training a young man for any vocation would it be doing him justice to compel him to spend most of his time on something which does not pertain to that position in any way?

No? Then why do you compel students in bookkeeping to work so hard acquiring a slow, shaded handwriting, which they cannot use satisfactorily in business? Business men do not want shaded writing in their books! They want rapid, unshaded, unflourished, neat and legible penmanship—not only for their books but for their correspondence. I have talked to them about this matter and know that I speak their sentiments.

A short time ago I wrote up two pages of a journal, one written in a smooth, unshaded hand, the other in a smooth shaded hand (and many times better than any six months student could write), and took them, myself, to all the prominent business men in Des Moines, including all the wholesale houses where the largest salaries are paid bookkeepers, and I have found but one man who favored the shaded writing, and he is proprietor of a small tailor shop, and I do not suppose his books are very extensive.

MISS ANNA NINTIN,

Than whom there is no better pen-artist among the ladies of our country, was formally introduced to the shifting scenes of planetary life, in Mt. Morris, Illinois, twenty-one years before this issue of the PEN-ART HERALD came from the press. At the age of eighteen she had completed the high school and university courses of study, and since that time has tained, mainly, from Professor A. M. Hargis, one of the proprietors of the Grand Island Business College, in which institution she is now teaching.

We are glad to be able to present, in this issue, the first of a series of illustrated articles on ornamental penmanship, from the pen of this distinguished lady—accompanied by her portrait and autograph; and we can assure our friends that in her designs and instructions they will ever find much of interest, merit and value. On behalf of the profession it espouses, the HERALD says, in emphatic tones, and heartily, Long live the QUEEN OF PEN-ART!

A SUGGESTION TO THE STUDENT OF PENMANSHIP.

The fact that you cannot enjoy the personal instruction of some professional teacher is no reason why you should despair of learning the art of penmanship. In fact, if you properly use the means right at your command, there is little need of taking a costly course in some distant school. Only keep one thing forever before your eyes—that is, you have brains, intellect, intelligence, mind, and reason, with muscles which need to be properly trained by these forces, and it matters little whether you ever see a more skillful penman than yourself—success is certain. There is nothing which will take the place of thinking. Throw off the shackles of ignorance, and determine to investigate and compare. If you have before you a specially attractive specimen of penmanship, try to find out what kind of training is required before you will be able to equal it. Do not allow dazzling results to dumfound you. Admiration is not coupled with wonder when brains are back of it. The class of people who are easily amazed at a new thing are not the class who excel in their different lines of work. Wonder never discovered a hidden reason, or unearthed a buried theory. In learning penmanship the exercise of brain-force is just as necessary as it is in the pursuit of the most difficult of scientific investigation.

Do not look at a meritorious piece of pen-work, and exclaim: "ELEGANT! I don't see how it is possible to do such fine work with a pen!" That is wonder. But rather talk to this fashion: "This piece appears to be very skillfully done; but I'll systematize its parts, become acquainted with the causes which produced it, and see how well the author has exercised them." That is admiration coupled with intelligence.

The Writing Teacher, Richmond, Va., is now a twenty-four page magazine. The last issue is a gem, and should be examined by everyone who loves penmanship or its literature.

E. L. Burnett is the "Representative" scribe whose sketch and portrait appear in the Journal. He well deserves the distinction.

The Western Penman promises an unusually fine number for December. The November issue contains an excellent specimen of pen-art from the hand of Professor H. J. Putman.

This neat and artistic pen-picture was photo-engraved from a pen and ink copy executed by Miss ANNA NINTIN, Grand Island, Nebraska, and is designed to illustrate and accompany her article on pen-drawing.

The more prominent a man or the larger the establishment the louder they spoke in favor of the unshaded and against the shaded writing. I consider this a fair and impartial test of the style of penmanship demanded by business men.

Penmen who teach slow, shaded writing to a student in bookkeeping are making a great mistake. They ought not to waste the valuable time of any young man by having him learn that which is of no real benefit to him, and, in many cases, a real hindrance.

I teach students in bookkeeping nothing but a plain, rapid style, with no shade whatever, and no flourish. I make two essentials to business writing: First, legibility; second, rapidity. This morning three students in my class wrote the word "shell" twenty-nine times in thirty seconds, and over forty got twenty-five words in the same time, and every word perfectly legible.

G. J. Kretschmer, Cleveland, executes, talks, dreams, and sings fine penmanship. He is doing some excellent work in all branches of the art.

taken a commercial course and acquired the greater part of her skill with the pen.

It is needless to refer to the fact that it is only within comparatively recent years that ladies have seen fit to cultivate the art of fine penmanship, either as a desirable accomplishment or for professional uses. It would seem, however, that, as far as natural capability for and adaptation to this work, counts in attaining proficiency in pen-art, the milder sex must ever claim the ascendancy. Woman's proverbial inherent appreciation of the beautiful, her superior taste and delicate sensibility; her critical eye and her comparative and analytical tendencies, all combine in rendering the highest skill in any branch of penmanship within her immediate reach. Reflecting, then, that for every year of her life there are, in our own country, at least a million of women with sufficient natural ability to gain an equal amount of skill with an instrument which every one of them use, daily, we cannot help concluding that Miss Nintin is deserving of all honor for her acknowledged superiority in the realm of the "Queen of Arts."

Her instruction in penmanship was ob-

A Amine S S

B B o o o o o H H

© Caaaaaaa M N

Stover N N

Edmund K. Km

F Fuccid G

E. G. Brown & N

H. H. H. H. H.

C. E. IONES

He is a firm and substantial friend of the HERALD, and is responsible, to some extent, for the rapid growth it is enjoying.

 This autograph was not hand-engraved, but photo-engraved from original rapid writing.

Pepper, Northern Indiana Normal School, Valparaiso, Ind., will send you beautiful specimens of WRITING, FLUENTING AND AUTOMATISM, for 25c. Circulars and Catalogue free.

The Automatic Shading Pen.

TWO COLORS AT A SINGLE STROKE.

THREE SIZES BY MAIL $1.00.

SAMPLE WRITING FREE.

J. W. STOKES, MILAN, O.

FREE. To get my new circular on Automatic Shading Pen-work in the hands of every reader of this paper, I will write and mail to any one sending their name and address, three gift-size cards, written in the finest style.

Address.

Box 256, CHICAGO, ILL.
Send a two cent stamp to pay for postage.

C. E. JONES' LESSONS BY MAIL.

—IN—

Automatic Penmanship.

This is no experiment. Success is certain to every one taking lessons who is willing to work. No student has failed yet, and I have had hundreds.

To my knowledge, no one else teaches Automatic Penmanship by mail.

The course is systematically arranged as far as is possible, but the lessons must be varied to every case to suit the particular needs of each student.

This is one of the most beautiful kinds of pen work and is within the reach of everyone, certain, who will take 21 lessons.

Some have done beautiful work after six lessons. All copies are fresh from my pen.

PRICES.

12 Lessons.....	$3 00
24 Lessons.....	5 00
Alphabets.....	15
Handsome Motto size 7x10 lettered and ornamented in a variety of colors.....	20
Automatic Shading Pen.....	25
Automatic Shading (assorted).....	1 00
Assorted powders for making ink for fine 12 Ornamented designs.....	25
Cards, per doz.....	30

Address.

PROF. C. E. JONES, TABOR, IOWA.

TESTIMONIALS.

James is one of the very finest Automatic pen artists.

The Western Freeman.

The art of lettering with an automatic pen has been reduced to a fine point by C. E. Jones, Principal of the Tabor College, Tabor, Iowa. That he has also the faculty of imagining skill to others is attested by numerous specimens of the work of his students, which we have been permitted to see.

Specimens of automatic pen-lettering received from Mr. Jones are the finest we have ever noticed.

Ed. Pen Art Herald.

The Pen Art Herald

You have now examined a copy of our paper, and it is safe to say that you have formed some opinion of it. Whether this impression be adverse or favorable, the Herald wishes to hear from you without delay. In the event that you have discovered in this issue some feature of merit which has pleased you, we shall esteem it a favor to be made aware of the fact at your earliest convenience. If you think the paper will be worth to you the amount of our subscription price, it will afford us pleasure to enroll you as a regular subscriber to it. If you have any serious fault to find with the nature of the periodical, however, we request that, before you send us your aid, you inform us of the defect. We are anxious to make our Herald valuable and interesting, and to that end welcome every criticism.

All doubt of the permanence of the enterprise is now removed, and we assure everyone that no risk is incurred through patronizing our paper.

Unless your subscription is sent in you will not be likely to see another copy of the PEN ART HERALD, so we take it for granted that you desire to pay for what you get.

Soliciting your patronage on our merits alone, and trusting that the pleasure of enrolling you and yours as subscribers and friends to the periodical may soon be ours, we remain,

The teacher and student's friend,

THE PEN ART HERALD.

CLEVELAND, O.

A SERIES OF LESSONS IN

Plain Writing

By H. J. PUTMAN and W. J. KINSLEY.

A New Work. New Plan. Admirably Arranged. Elegantly Engraved. Finest of Heavy Paper. Best of Printing.

Half the Usual Price.

PRICE FIFTY CENTS.

The copies are elegantly engraved on copper, printed from stone on the finest kind of very heavy plate paper. All copies new; no rehabs. There are two parts:

PART ONE.

These slips are not bound and are all devoted to plain writing.

Part 2 contains seventy slips. These slips are not bound and are all devoted to plain writing. The small letters are given in order in which they should be taught.

The figures are analyzed by means of staff lines, and a great variety of commercial abbreviations given. Forms of draft, receipt and bill are prominent features. One slip of small writing is given.

PART TWO.

Part 2 is the "Instruction Book" to accompany the slips. This is the most complete one ever given in connection with a book of this kind.

It contains chapters on "Materials," "Position" (giving cuts), "Form," "Movement," and "General Information." There are twenty lessons mapped out.

The slips and "Instruction Book" are enclosed in a neat and substantial case.

The reader may think from the generous use of the adjectives in this advertisement that we have been employed to write up "ads" for Barnum's Circles, but you will find below a few opinions from prominent printers and educators, and the best of it is we have no more of them. Watch the different penmanship papers and you will see some of the others.

TESTIMONIALS.

PROF. S. D. FORBES, Editor of "International Exponent" and Prin. of Atlanta (Pa.) Bus. Coll.:—Your "Series of Lessons" just suits me. It is the finest thing in the form of a compendium I have examined.

PROF. J. M. DAVIS, Prin. Com'l and Pen. Dept. North Neb. Normal College, Madison, Neb.:—I have examined your "Series of Lessons in Plain Writing" and pronounce it complete and perfect. It is better than any similar publication I have seen. The arrangement of the copies, together with the full instructions, make it a valuable aid to the teacher of penmanship as well as to the beginner.

PROF. W. N. FERRIS, Prin. Rapids (Mich.) Industrial School:—I shall say a good word for your beautiful work. You deserve to reap a rich reward, and the people can learn of the existence of your "Lessons" as you will reap it.

Agents wanted in every town and school. A liberal discount given. Money can be made selling the "Lessons." Collect all other "Compendiums" on writing, send for a copy of the "Lessons" and compare. One can be ordered in this manner, and it will prevent defrauding the remaining people who want copies. If this work is not better arranged, has not a better quality of work, printing, paper, etc., and does not give more for the money than any similar thing published, we will refund the money upon pay postage for return, providing that it is returned in good condition.

Price, FIFTY CENTS. Stamps not taken.

Address either of the places named below that is nearest to you.

PUTMAN & KINSLEY,

P. O. Box 186, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. P. O. Box 787, SHENANDOAH, IOWA.

Wright's Bookkeeping Simplified—A Key to Double Entry

Nearly 200 pages, brimful and overflowing with lightning methods and short roads to results. It contains a full set of books, conducted through two months' business-like and scientific routine, showing the New York business method of opening, keeping, and closing books, exhibiting gain or loss, assets and liabilities, net capital, etc. And one bookkeeper in 1,000 who knows how to close books properly, monthly or yearly. This book illustrates approved methods, assuring students where failure would otherwise be inevitable—methods that kept the artist's services in demand by large houses at a good salary for sixteen years, because methods work knowing. The experienced bookkeeper thinks he knows it all, should disabuse his misguided judgment by reading this book and find it not badly, and learn much to him before unknown. It settles many points to his infinite satisfaction about which he has long been in doubt. It will enable him to do twice the work in half the time. The inexperienced or student will find it a thorough full of important information from floor to roof, and index to appendix. The legendary story of the old school of bookkeeping was to JOURNALIZE EVERYTHING, a rule more honored in the breach than the observance; its old-time motto was first day doing, however, and will solve his troubles as he finds out the boundaries of another world. This book sounds the keynote to a new school of bookkeeping, as it were, JOURNALIZE NOTHING. Sweet cadence of a new southern resonant with common sense. A wonderful book, leading all others in point of merit and popularity, pronounced by leading papers to be the best ever issued from the press. LIBRARY DISCOUNT IN LOTTS, $2.00. Sent by mail, postpaid. A 24-page Descriptive Circular free. Address.

P. A. WRIGHT, Author and Publisher, 769 BROADWAY, N. Y.

SPECIAL.

CARDS—Good quality (for short time only) 15 cents per dozen; 35 for only 35 cents.

FLLOURISHING.

PRICES—$2.10, 25 cents, or 3 for 30 cents, Larger, prices 50, 75c, and $1.00.

ENGROSSING.

Engrossing and display work of every description to suit customers. I make a specialty of this kind of work. My work is first-class, and prices reasonable.

A. E. DEWHURST, UTICA, N. Y.

On receipt of order with cash, will write your name in Superior Style on one dozen cards for 25c. Two dozen, 45c. Specimens flourishing 10c, or 3 for 25c. Address,

J. F. FISCH, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE BEST

Commercial

COLLEGE.

Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Short-Hand, Type Writing, Normal Studies and Automatic Lettering are Thoroughly Taught

AT THE

NATIONAL

PEN ART HALL

AND

Business College

DELAWARE, OHIO.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

MICHAEL'S PATENT

Oblique Holder.

Sold at all Book Stores.

Send for Price List of Michael's

Compendium, Copy Books of Rapid Writing, Practice Paper, Black Ink, French Pens and Oblique Holders. The very best articles for Writing Schools and Public Schools.

Address,

G. W. MICHAEL & CO.,

DELAWARE, OHIO.

"Pen Strokes"

IS FARLEY'S LATEST & BEST

All who order the "GUIDE" within 30 days will receive a copy of "PEN STROKES" free.

REVISED. IMPROVED. ENLARGED

THE MODEL

Guide-Penmanship

With Copy Slips on a New Plan.

Price of "Guide," 25c.; "Pen Strokes," 15c.; "Chirography," 10c.; Price Specimens 10c. (Ornamental Specimens from the pen, 25c. When all are ordered at once, 75c. Address,

W. B. Farley,

TRENTON, N.J.

515 East State Street.

262 PEARL STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

THE PENMANSHIP HERALD

DEVOTED TO THE LITERATURE OF PENMANSHIP

Vol. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY, 1898.

No. 5.

A WORTHY BUSINESS EDUCATOR.

Professor Frank D. Gorsline, whose portrait and autograph are here presented, is one of the most successful of the younger members of the Fraternity Educational and Penmanistic. While having entered the business college work within the past three years, he has built up a school which justly ranks among the foremost in our country.

Professor Gorsline is a gentleman of about one hundred and twenty seasons in the matter of age; the foundation of his penmanship and business knowledge was laid through a course of instruction in the Grand River Institute, Austinburg, O., the penman of the school being Professor M. L. Hubbard, one of the early teachers of Professor U. McKee, Oberlin. Not a few of his days and nights have been whiled away in the uncertain ways of the itinerant teacher of writing, his experience in this field having been productive of much good, financially and otherwise.

His success in the management of the Ohio Business University is not surprising, as he thoroughly merits it all. Being of an enterprising nature, observant and ambitious, he has utilized every available means for improving his institution, until its every appointment and facility is on a par with the finest schools of its kind. Having gathered about him a faculty of marked proficiency and adaptability to the work—all of whom are excellent penmen—his future prosperity will be a matter of certainty.

By marriage he is connected with some of the best families of the "Forest City," and in the conduct of his institution he is greatly aided by his estimable lady, whose musical and other talents are remarkable.

It is safe to predict that in the next decade of business college history few names will play a more conspicuous part than his.

THE CAUSES OF ERRORS IN WRITING AND HOW TO CORRECT THEM.

BY S. R. WEBSTER.

An essential element in "teaching power" is the ability to not only detect defects in the pupil's work, but also to determine the direct cause of such defects.

I am convinced that errors in the writing of careful pupils are results of two causes—causes that more widely differ from each other than the remedies usually applied in correcting them.

It is not the design of this article to attempt to classify errors, and separate essentials from non-essentials in the hand writings suited to the different callings of business and professional life. Such an attempt would, doubtless, lead to much discussion as to what should, with the greatest good to the learner, receive prominence under given conditions. But what I desire is to urge those who are actively engaged in teaching to seek to penetrate the errors they deem important as the arm and hand obey the will; but, on the other hand, the form produced, if not an exact counterpart of the mind-picture (which every penman knows to his sorrow will rarely be the case), tends to change that mental picture through the visual organ, and an adjustment of the one to the other immediately begins to take place.

This principle is sometimes brought of the parlor takes the form of the new arrangement, and what seemed out of place at first, seems now—under the perfect accord of mental and external pictures—to be the most harmonious arrangement that could possibly be made. The same is true with respect to nearly every object of daily association. Even the tumble-down buildings of a village do not present the same incongruous appearance to those who see them daily as they do to the stranger passing by. Why, then, should we expect the same feelings of pleasure and delight to tingle through the sensoria of him who dashes off that unsystematic hand and of him who reads his productions? But this principle of the adjustment of the mind-picture to the external object shows the importance of placing accurate forms before the pupil and keeping them there during his disciplinary period, and of making him thoroughly familiar with the forms and proportion of letters.

The errors belonging to the second class are called muscular, because they are the results of the disobedience of certain muscles of the arm and hand. These errors predominate in the productions of the unskilled pen, growing less and less as the hand is brought under the control of the writer, while the mechanical errors become more and more prominent, the two classes finding a common center in the established hand of each individual.

In the process of training, what is needed for the correction of muscular errors is practice, with frequent reference to correct forms that the mind picture may remain unimpaired by the faulty productions that are continually appealing to the eye. But practice for the correction of a mechanical error should never be prescribed until the pupil's mental picture of the form in question has been covered. Mechanical errors are not discovered by the pupil without the use of certain aids, such as well written copies or an application of the rules of measurement; but he is conscious of muscular errors, unless they very closely coincide with his mind-picture, the moment they take visible forms.

If the above is conceded by the reader, some of the advantages gained by being able to detect the true source of errors are at once apparent. (1) It enables the teacher to economize time. (2) When discovering that an error is muscular he can give the pupil a word of encouragement that will incite him to renewed efforts to attain satisfactory results, instead of deepening the gloom of discouragement that already overshadows him in to correct and discover their causes. This feature of school room work does not always receive due consideration.

F. D. Gorsline.

The errors of the first class to which we desire to refer are sometimes called mechanical, because their production has become purely mechanical by continued repetition, being results of causes of imperfect impressions upon the mind. Perhaps I should say results and causes, for I doubt if a defect in the mind picture can be attributed wholly to an original misconception of form. If there was an original faulty impression upon the mind there would certainly follow a defect in the execution corresponding with the defect in the mind-picture in such measure home to us with considerable force when we enter our homes and find that certain changes have been made in the arrangement of the parlor furniture. Although the refined taste and critical eye of the ruling spirit of the house may have wrought decided improvements and produced most pleasing results, yet things seem to be out of place. There does not seem to be that harmony and accord in relation of object to object that formerly existed. The picture does not immediately fit our minds. (No allusion to those good fellows who condemn graceful and systematic forms); but the adjusting process is commenced with the first glance, and as time passes on our mental picture consequence of his failures by an untimely criticism. (3) When discovering that an error is mechanical, he knows at once that the appeal should be made to the mind, and this must be done unless he would do his pupil positive harm. (4) It enables the teacher to have a definite aim every time he glances at a practice sheet, and to expand his energy in such channels as will be productive of the greatest possible good. (5) It elevates him to the true sphere of a teacher and enables him to dignify his calling by efficient labor.

Let every teacher seek to know the true source of objectionable errors in each pupil's work, and, in many cases, the effectiveness of that part of his labor which is devoted to individual criticisms will be increased tenfold.

PROFESSOR S. J. PRIDGEN.

The subject of this sketch, Professor S. J. Pridgen, M. A., was born twelve miles southwest of Goldsboro, Wayne county, North Carolina, September 21, 1866.

His parents were poor, energetic and hard-working people. Mr. Pridgen, the father of the subject of this sketch, was a farmer, and by the sweat of his brow managed to give his son a liberal education. Being the only child in the family, he gives his parents entire credit for what he knows and what he is.

At the age of fourteen, young Pridgen was sent to the King's Mountain high school, one of the most popular military

The original of the above was executed by Miss Mand Evans, a pupil of the skilled Canadian teacher, Professor D. McLachlan.

ments of analytical chemistry and advanced mathematics, had him appointed as an instructor in mathematics. At the age of seventeen he was promoted to the office of second lieutenant in the corps of cadets and soon thereafter he became the regular teacher of penmanship in the commercial department of the King's Mountain high school. These positions he filled with satisfaction to his employers and with credit to himself. In 1885, after resigning his positions, he started for the "Gem City Business College," Quincy, Illinois, of which Professor D. L. Musselman is principal, to complete an extended course in penmanship, etc. After having been graduated with honor from the "Gem City Business College," he was offered at a greatly increased salary, the professorship of penmanship in the commercial department of the King's Mountain high

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM JAMES W. HARKINS.

HE TALKS ON MATTERS OF LIVING AND CURRENT INTEREST.

CURTIS COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, 1
MEANS STREET, JOB. 5, 1888.

My Dear Showalter:—So you ask me for a contribution to your columns? Are you not afraid to thus recklessly extend an invitation to one whose literary abilities are quoted at a minimum, or who at least is languishing in the mists of obscurity? I read your article, "Torn from a Private Letter," and somehow, your modest, yet sturdy way of expressing yourself, touched a responsive chord within me. As to the article which drew it forth, we all know the writer too well to think for a moment that he really meant anything unkind or depreciatory. However, I am

But of course we have no more of this class than any other community or profession, presumably. (I add the last word because it sounds well, and renders the preceding statement less positive). Still, if we are to be represented in journalism, and place our thoughts and ideas on record before the world, for the sake of our standing, let us dress them in proper and presentable raiment.

It has become a habit with some writers, no matter how serious or practical the subject, to exert themselves laboriously to introduce an element of humor; and if we could recognize it as such, it would be, perhaps, acceptable, if not exactly commendable; but clean, reliable humor was never yet introduced through the medium of slang phrases and pirated witticisms, which, with their first usage, lost their brilliancy.

Note the descriptive adjectives, abundantly tinctured with metaphor; the extravagant phraseology, better fitted for the columns of a sporting paper, than those of journals which are considered by the private community—whatever may be the private opinion of the profession—to be representative of the erudition of our calling.

I would not have my words construed in a sense that I desired to lower the standard of penmanship, or its occupancy in the columns of our papers. No! In the language of the immortal Pierce, I exclaim, "Long may it wave!" but I would like to see the penmen repudi-schools in the south. The first year was devoted to classical and scientific studies, and the second to commercial studies and artistic penmanship, under the direction of that accomplished penman and successful teacher of penmanship, Professor R. S. Collins, now of Knoxville, Tennessee. On the thirtieth of May, 1882, he was graduated with high honors, to the degree of Master of Accounts.

The original of the above is from Prof. S. E. Bartow's pen.

It was under the guidance of Professor Collins' master hand that he first caught the inspiration of the beautiful in penmanship.

Not thinking his knowledge of classical and scientific studies adequate to his future needs, he returned to the King's Mountain high school, and resumed these studies with a diligence that merits high commendation. In fact, so faithful and diligent was he in his duties and studies, that Professor F. P. Matz, Ph. D., (formerly of the Johns Hopkins University), who was then at the head of the department, after having accepted this offer, he was soon engaged also as an assistant in the commercial department. After filling these positions for some time, he was called to Greely, Colorado, to a rather remunerative position, which he filled in an acceptable manner, until he was called to a responsible and well-paying position in Moore's Business University in Atlanta, Georgia, in which he is now teaching with his accustomed effectiveness and success. Specimens of his artistic pen-work have been published in various journals and admired by all who saw them. From a personal acquaintance with Professor S. J. Pridgen, extending over many years, we find it a pleasure, and not a task to write this brief sketch, as well as to predict great success for our former student, in his specialty—Penmanship—which has been truly styled, "The Queen of Arts."

F. P. MATZ.

Charlotte, N. C.,
December 7, 1887.

straying into hay-lofts which may contain hornet's nests, so I'll refrain.

Really though, Showalter, I think your ground extremely well taken, and presumably not difficult to defend, for surely all thinking members of our fraternity will endorse the sentiments you utter. It is unquestionably true that an alarming evil has grown up of late in our midst; an evil which we cannot easily overestimate, since it springs up at the source of a stream which flows to us all.

I refer to the ridiculously light turn which our penmanship literature has taken within the last two years. I am trying to guard against extravagant phrasing when I mention this evil, hence the term, "ridiculously light turn." You hit the nail square on the head when you said, "There are a great many penmen who sadly need the higher style of literature, and they will never procure it unless it can be obtained in connection with the journals of their profession."

ate the charge of illiteracy, and broaden the scope of their world. It would be rank treason for me to say that there exists anything combining so many elements of the perfect and celestial, as penmanship. But dear Showalter, the world is full of good things. Why then expose ourselves to the charge of narrowness of ideas, when by reaching forth our hand we can grasp that which, without detracting from the usefulness of our chosen profession, will make us full men.

An article in a recent number of one of our representative papers, written in rather inelegant, but highly expressive language, would serve as a text for a sermon of illimitable length. Following the advent of a bright young quilldriver to the editorial chair of one of our Western journals, came a style of literary presentment, that was not only entirely new and peculiar to the man himself, but highly entertaining and refreshing.

This young editor had the rare faculty of presenting dry, but necessary physic, in so palatable and alluring a form, that we actually smacked our lips and asked for more.

That this new departure was relished, was evidenced by the result, which follows success in any line. The style became prevalent, or rather a sickly attempt at the style. Month after month it has been dinned into our ears, till at last it grows absolutely false.

Now, Showalter, if you consider it your duty to help root out this fungus, I should say from what I know of your capabilities, that you are the man. You will find it necessary, however, to direct your blows at the effect. The cause is pure and wholesome, but became polluted by intermingling elements. Does this seem ambiguous or paradoxical?

SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

THE MEETING AT CEDAR RAPIDS A GRAND SUCCESS—ENTHUSIASTIC PENMEN.

The second meeting of the Western Penmen's Convention, held at Cedar Rapids during the holiday week of 1887, was an unprecedented success. Never in the history of our profession has there been so pleasant and profitable a gathering of enthusiastic quill-drivers. About ninety penmen were on hand, and unwilling to let the interest flag in the least. Every session was well attended, and the enthusiasm was still at its height at the adjournment.

A business meeting was called Monday night and started the ball. Everyone was on hand Tuesday morning for Professor I. W. Pierson's lesson on move-speech and said she had gained a great deal.

S. J. PRIDDEN.

[See sketch on second page.]

Those who partook most freely in the general discourses were: C. H. Pierce, I. W. Pierson, W. J. Kinsley, J. B. Duryea, A. E. Parsons, C. N. Crandle, F. J. Toland, C. C. Curtis, B. C. Wood, A. N. Palmer, and G. R. Rathbun.

The next meeting will be held at Davenport, Ia., and no penman can afford to stay away. A. MEMBER.

Mr. J. R. McFarren advertises a pen-picture in this issue which will prove an interesting study to the art-loving penman.

J. G. Anderson manufactures poetry to order, and he does it with no faint touch of genius. Try one of his acrostics.

The very skillful flourish given above is reproduced from the pen and ink copy of Miss Anna Norton, and may be profitably practiced by students of flourishing. We regret that the instructions to accompany it have been delayed.

Of course, your contemporaries cannot presume to dictate as to the style and phraseology of their contributors or advertisers, more particularly the latter, who pay for the privilege; but by putting our shoulders to the wheel, all together, we can, and will crush an evil, as yet in its incipency.

Hoping you will treat this somewhat lengthy dissertation with patience, I remain,

Yours for reform,
JAMES W. HARKINS.

The reliable advertiser, P. A. Wright, whose latest work on accounts is described on the last page of this issue, seems to be in earnest in his efforts to inculcate in text books real business knowledge and methods. No book-keeper, student or teacher should be without his new work.

ment exercises. Professor Pierson, in his usual manner, fired the interest into everyone present. A lively discussion followed. Next came a drill to beginners in a business college by J. B. Duryea. This was followed by an interesting discussion, and so followed the entire programme.

The following penmen gave drills or lessons—the convention acting in the capacity of students: I. W. Pierson of Burlington, Ia.; J. B. Duryea of Des Moines, Ia.; A. N. Palmer of Cedar Rapids, Ia.; G. R. Rathbun of Omaha, Neb.; B. C. Wood of Davenport, Ia.; C. C. Curtis of Minneapolis, Minn.; A. E. Parsons of Wilton, Ia.; C. J. Connor of Storm Lake, Ia.; C. H. Pierce of Keokuk, Ia.; W. H. Whigham of Cedar Rapids, Ia.; O. O. Runkle of Marshalltown, Ia.; F. J. Toland of Canton, Ill.; C. Bayless of Dubuque, Ia.; W. J. Kinsley of Shenandoah, Ia.; G. W. Brown of Jacksonville, Ill.; D. W. Hoff of Des Moines, Ia.; E. H. Robins of Jacksonville, Ill.; C. N. Crandle of Dixon, Ill., and others.

The discussion that followed each lesson was animated and full of interest and profit.

The entertainment on Friday evening was exceptionally fine, thanks to Professor Palmer's efforts. Professor Chapman merited the praise of everyone. His response to the address of welcome was received with cheers. His presidency was perfect; in fact, he kept the work in such a vein that not a minute was lost in idle ranging.

E. E. Stevens of Wason, Ohio, made a rousing speech and said that he came there to attend the convention and intended to come again next year. Mrs. Ellis of Little Sioux, Ia., made a cheering

A pennant ought to have a library; and in that library there ought to be found all publications and works pertaining, in any manner, to the work in which he is engaged. To particularize, we would urge all who would possess a work on penmanship of conspicuous merit to add to their list of earthly goods at once, "A Series of Lessons in Plain Writing."

Oblique holders are indispensable to the penman; and the firm of Holcomb & Company, to whose card we call attention, are the leading manufacturers of this line of goods in the country.

The Ohio Business University is enjoying unprecedented growth. It will pay young men in search of thorough business training to turn their faces towards this thriving educational workshop.

The Pen=Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature.

Subscription price, Sixty cents per year, single numbers, Ten cents each.

See our Premium Offers on page 7.

Do not send stamps when postal note can be obtained.

Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 inch, 1 month,	$2.	3 months,	$5.	1 year,	$18.
1/2 inch, 1 "	1.	3 "	3.	10 "	12.
3/4 col., 1 "	8.	3 "	20.	1 "	60.
1 "	12.	3 "	30.	1 "	100.

CLUB RATES:

5 to 10, Fifty-five cents each.
10 to 25, Fifty cents each.
25 to 50, Rates made known on application.

These rates include the "Alphabets" as premium.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every business or other kind of live school in the land, to act as our representative, and to solicit subscriptions and advertisements for the HERALD. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 512 PEARL STREET

W. D. SHAWALTER,

Editor and Publisher.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Entered at the Post Office at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class mail matter.

THE EDITOR ON A THINKING EXCURSION.

Has the HERALD any issue to discuss? any hobby to worry to death? Michael's issue is Rapid Writing; Palmer's, muscular movement. Some anxious brethren are inquiring the nature of the HERALD's pet theories. We have none. The mission upon which we have started is to make our brother toilers stop and think about the things connected with their work. The impression that penmanship is a narrow theme, and that new thought upon this branch is impossible, has become alarmingly prevalent. To assist in giving the profession, in which we have spent our days thus far, a literature of its own, is our primary object. Our penmanship periodicals—all of them—are excellent in their way. They reflect the choicest gems of pen-art from their picture-like pages. And yet it cannot be denied that the journalistic portions of some of them are secondary. School interests and other matters dividing the thought and attention of the editors of such papers, it cannot be expected that the editorial thought will be of the brightest. And it will scarcely be denied, either, that a journal is a dry affair with, other brightness of thought, intensity and force characterize its editorial and contributed contents. How well we have succeeded in clothing substantial thought in presentable word raiment—in dressing ideas in a garb suitable for intellectual society—must be determined by those in whose interests we are working. It will suffice for us to say that the task is just commenced, and that we feel that our efforts have been, as yet, but feeble and, perhaps, ineffectual. But in the future we hope to better illustrate our mission and our objects. Let it be remembered that in attempting to present original and suggestive forms of expression we do so for the sake of the thought embodied—not alone for the pleasure of linking together strange and odd-sounding phrases. In the articles and editorials which we shall present, there will be found fully as much of substantial thought and ideas as though we made no attempt to heighten their effect by using as good grammar and rhetoric as we have at command.

Gaskell's Magazine is about the leading paper of its class—if we are to trust our own judgment in the matter, strengthened by like expressions from competent critics. Scarborough is growing brighter and wittier since dividing himself.

Professor S. J. Pridden suggests that it would be advisable and proper to classify the small letter 'y' with the loop letters. It has long seemed to us that in systematizing and simplifying the letters of the alphabet, it would be as well to merge the semi-extended group into the extended loop group, or to effect some sort of compromise between them. While this is but a small point, it will repay thought, and we hope that the live teachers will give us an expression of their views upon the subject.

practical ideas and methods with those of such representative artists and workers as Pierson of Burlington, Putnam of Minneapolis, Stevens of Wauson, Palmer of Cedar Rapids, Duryea of Des Moines, Behrensmeier of Quincy, Peirce of Keokuk, Wood of Davenport, Curtiss of Minneapolis, Hargis of Grand Island, Rathbun of Omaha, Chapman of Des Moines and Toland of Canton. The extreme cities represented were—east, Wauson, Ohio; west, Grand Island, Nebraska; north, Minneapolis, and south,

Photo-engraved from the pen-work copy of Miss Mina Losure, whose portrait and autograph appear above.

From all sides we hear of the success of the recent Convention of Western Penmen. Many affirm that it was by all odds the most successful, harmonious and profitable meeting the profession has ever held. There could be no better indication of the increasing importance of our calling and the general recognition it is commanding, than the unparalleled success of the third independent meeting of a penman's association in America. The daily press of Cedar Rapids contains detailed reports of the proceedings of the body; and among those present at its sessions we recognize the names of some of the most prominent professionals in the country: Professor Bayless, the sturdy and hard working schoolmaster of Dubuque, in company with a member of his faculty, Professor French, smiled upon his co-workers at the Rapids; Kinsley left the class-room for a week to mingle his

Kansas City. For the coming year Professor C. C. Curtiss has been elected president; C. H. Peirce, vice-president; A. N. Palmer, secretary; D. W. Hoff, assistant secretary, and G. R. Rathbun, treasurer.

There is something pathetic in the efforts of most young writers to use a sort of sublimity in every expression. The instinct of beauty is so strongly inherent in most amateur press contributors that their compositions—to others—possess a sort of uncertainty and lack of solidity, which renders the meaning difficult to compass. In nothing is it easier to fail than in trying to assume a poetical, imaginative style of composition. It is difficult to stand amid the hard stones of actualities and hold them up to others clothed in a sunbeam or decked with flowers. Such widely different substances are only capable of being skillfully blended by the hand of one to whom all forms of expression—all qualities of mind—all shades of thought—all sentiments and emotions—all substances and shadows—are but subjects of his conception, servants of his purposes. The relations of sublime things and material things must be so well defined in his mind that there is no danger of unhappily applying illustrations or of failing to appropriately employ figures of speech.

Planning an idea in a human mind that its development may tend to render the duties of life easier, drilling a hand to perform the duties which await it with skill and facility; guiding, directing, assisting, cultivating, encouraging—these enter into the life of the teacher. But where is the fruit? Where shall we look for the results? The boy for whose welfare the tired teacher labors so hard, enters the channels of business activity, and his old school days remain only as a broken memory. The training received at the hands of the teacher is moulded into money-making power by contact with realities instead of rules, but if a grateful memory of the teacher remains, he is rarely made aware of it. To work without results is the most discouraging lot in life, and in no other line of labor are the results so obscure as in teaching. But the teacher must remember that everything bears fruit; we can do nothing without effecting something. The results may not be material; the effects may be hidden; but we can assure ourselves that they exist, that they are known to someone.

MISS MINA LOSURE.

There are but few young ladies whose skill in the different branches of penmanship equals that of the subject of our illustration. In page writing her work shows, probably, to its greatest advantage; and yet she is an excellent general artist, as her specimen of flourishing on this page will fully attest.

Miss Losure is a young lady of education and refinement. While her educational advantages have been limited, principally, to the public schools of her native town of Wauson, Ohio, she has, by home study and labor, acquired a broader and more varied culture and knowledge than is afforded through those channels.

Being a very poor writer, she determined to improve in this as well as in other directions, and in order to accomplish this, she entered, in the fall of 1886, the Pen-Art Hall, Wauson, of which Professor E. E. Stevens, well known in penmanship circles, is principal. Her improvement in writing was remarkable; she became fascinated with the work, and devoted her whole energies to the acquirement of skill. After graduating she went to Morenci, Michigan, where she organized and taught a class in penmanship, her success being marked and encouraging. Upon the completion of her term at this place she accepted a position as assistant teacher of our Art in the school from which she had graduated, where she still labors. In the school-room she is energetic, enthusiastic and pleasant, possessing the confidence and esteem of all with whom she comes in contact.

Miss Losure is a worthy example of a successful lady teacher of penmanship, and the fact that she finds our profession congenial and profitable should induce scores of others to enter it.

A LESSON IN PENMANSHIP.

BY R. H. SPENCER.

In preparing this lesson I have endeavored to present my methods of teaching writing in such a light that the suggestions offered herein will lend some new inspiration to all aspiring young penmen who read the PEN-ART HERALD, and to the teachers of penmanship who have not ridden their pet hobbies so long but that they can stop for a moment and consider the views of others and feel that they have been benefited. Yet to the teacher who has been a careful reader of the penmen's papers, it seems to be a task not easily performed, to present anything new from those theories that have been advocated, time and again, by the leading "lights" in our profession.

That there has been an improvement in the art of teaching writing in the past few years is unquestioned. That I may be confirmed in saying this, I will refer you to the vast number of my brother penmen who are advocating strictly pure muscular movement. There are young men to-day, scattered all over our country, who are writing a rapid and beautiful hand. Why is this so? Because they have received proper instruction in movement. Not many years ago I was teaching in a business college where the head of that institution had the reputation of being one of the best teachers of penmanship in the land. That he got fair results from his teaching I know, but I believe he might have gotten far better if he would have explained to his class what is meant by muscular movement once or twice a week instead of once in two months.

In this age of advancement and vast improvement, it is not time for a revolution in the art of teaching writing to meet the growing demands of business? Certainly there are hundreds of old veterans yet in the field who will stick to and still advocate "whole-arm movement." Not because they think it is the best method to gain practical results, but for policy's sake. They have used "whole-arm movement" all their lives, and for them to reform now is no easy thing.

There are teachers of penmanship in business colleges whose writing goes through the mails day after day and is held up as a model of practical business writing, but if the same style were taught to their pupils after the fashion it was executed, it would be nothing more nor less than saying to their class, "Here—you have just as much time as you wish in writing this copy; it matters not what movement you use or how many times you raise the pen so that you make the letter exact."

Remember the old adage, "Practice what you preach." If teachers use one style of writing and recommend another, they certainly lack the requisites necessary for successful instructors.

We have a method by which all the letters in the alphabet can be made accurately, with forms as good as there are in the Spencerian System, without raising the pen or moving the fingers or lifting the arm from the desk. This movement is the muscular movement, and no other for practical purposes should be taught or used.

For the sake of those who may not be thoroughly familiar with the muscular movement, I will here describe it in the same words that I employ daily in explaining it to my classes. It calls for two rests, one for the forearm and one for the hand. The arm rests on the desk, on the muscle, just forward of the elbow, which forms a cushion and gives play to may be practiced to better advantage like the small letters here given.

The small letters should be taken up for practice according to their simplicity; of these, the small a is the easiest, and is a good letter with which to get the stu-position, there is one thing else of just as much importance, and that is form. While you are acquiring movement you are gaining a knowledge of the form of letters, so that movement and form must go together.

Don't continually harp on absolute accuracy and hairbreath analysis. This will tend to influence the student in using a cramped finger movement, and writhe and twist around like a contortionist. Insist upon neatness and every attempt to better the previous letter, and you will have your class making rapid strides.

Short word copies are the best. Short sentences may also be used.

To be a successful teacher it is necessary to execute well, be full of enthusiasm and dead in earnest.

SORRY.

To our exceeding great regret and annoyance the HERALD is about a week late this month. We aim to get out about the twentieth of the month of issue; but the larger part of our cuts were injured this month, compelling us to have the work duplicated—which has caused the delay. Those of our constituents who have had experience in procuring engravings can understand that delays are sometimes unavoidable. The following from our engraver will explain the matter:

PITTSBURGH, PA., Jan. 19, 1888.

ESTEEMED FRIEND:—I know you will pardon our delay on the pen-work you sent us some days ago. We met with an accident that compels us to do this entire work (save the portrait) over again. We hope to have it for you next week. It was purely an accident and not careless. It seems sometimes the more we endeavor to do for our friends the more we encounter.

Truly yours,

J. W. CAUGHEY.

JUST A WORD.

Are you pleased with the HERALD, my brother? Do you regard it as a valuable help in the work of the office or school-room? If you are convinced that it deserves your patronage, why not extend it at once? Can you not do something for the prosperity of the paper? Would not a little effort on your part secure a few extra subscribers? Suppose you look around and see if you can find a friend or pupil who would profit by its visits. May we not rely upon your co-operation? We hope to hear from all of our professional friends during the next month.

SPECIAL OFFER TO SCHOOLS.

Desiring to further extend our rapidly increasing school circulation, we will give to each school sending us within the next thirty days a club of twenty-five subscribers—at special club rates—three inches of single column advertising space in any issue desired. This offer is made to double our subscription list within a month. If you feel like taking advantage of it, please write us at once for special club discounts.

MARRIED.

On Monday evening, January 23, at the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. Frank Sealand, 152 Dare street, Cleveland, Ohio, by the Rev. Dr. Robinson, pastor of the Franklin Avenue M. E. Church, W. D. Shwalter, editor of this journal, and Miss Frankie M. Craine were united in marriage.

This design is from the skilled hand of Prof. C. C. Maring, formerly connected with the Canada Business College, Chatham, Ont.

the hand. The hand rests on the tips of the nails of the third and fourth fingers or on the tip of the little finger—either way is good. Now when you practice, bring the muscle forward of the elbow under control, letting the tips of the finger started on the right track in using the correct movement and spacing. In writing this copy, in order to keep your class wide awake, you should count one for each letter and write from one hundred to one hundred and twenty per fingers slide on the paper in the direction of the pen point. The copies given in this lesson should be practiced with this movement. I think it best for beginners to practice the capitals singly without being connected, but after a free movement is acquired and sufficient skill, they minute. It is also a good plan to have your class write crosswise, with the paper reversed. They will learn, in this way, to write straight across a page of unruled paper.

Prof. B. H. Spencer of Albany, N. Y., whose penmanistic ideas and convictions are presented in his lesson this month, wrote the copy for the above exercises.

While you should constantly insist upon proper movement and an easy, graceful

PREMIUMS.

It is generally believed that the HERALD is fully worth all we charge for it; yet we are willing to make it doubly so, in order that there may be no doubt in the minds of those interested as to the wisdom of subscribing for it. Our premiums are giving excellent satisfaction, and it would be hard to find more valuable or taking publications for that purpose. We still offer the "Series of Lessons in Plain Writing" and a year's subscription to the HERALD for one dollar—currency or postal note. For seventy-five cents we will send the HERALD a year and ten of "Kilbe's Alphabets" the best aids to artistic penmanship. Without premium, thirty cents per year. If the HERALD meets with your favor we hope to receive your subscription at once. How are you pleased with this number?

PEN ART HERALD.

Cleveland, O.

To the person sending us the largest club of subscribers before February 15, 1888, we will give five complimentary yearly subscriptions to the HERALD, sending it to any of their friends whom they may designate, also allowing them the regular club discount. Stir up your names, teachers, and send us a good list of names before that date.

Professor S. E. Bartow's penmanship is being widely admired. He has few equals in writing and flourishing.

M. P. Bonham, Hope, Indiana, a former pupil of Professor Fielding Schofield, does very handsome work in flourishing, and the same may be said of another of the professor's talented boys, W. U. Morland of Quincy, Illinois.

Headquarters for Patent Oblique Pen-Holders.
Manufactured only by Holcomb & Co.
TRIANGULAR OBLIQUE PEN-HOLDER.

The only Holder that gives both points of Pen to paper at proper slant to make it "Run Smooth as a Quill."

A wonderful aid to good easy writing; a boon to learners. Price: each, 4 for 25c, or 5 for 30c, postpaid. Special price by the gross.

Favorite Outing Hour, This Our Round Oblique Holder, which is used and endorsed by more expert penmen than any other Holder in the market. The best in use for the first time, will make and make it your own a good one! Beware of imitation and infringement! Price: 14c each, 4 for 50c, or 5 for 60c, per dozen postpaid. Special price by the gross.

Send, Please—Spiral No. 1—This is our own pen, made under our direction, expressly for us. The best "practice pen" made. Similar to "Spiralizer" No. 1. We ask you to pay for the pen only, but for its reputation. Price, $1.50 a gross. Sample gross mailed for 50c. None finer. GILBERT'S No. 604. Price per gross, by mail, 750c. 5 gross, 250c. Send a stamp for special rate on 1 to 75 gross at a time.

HOLCOMB &amp; CO.,

Manufacturers, Publishers, Bookellers, CASE BLOCK, CLEVELAND, O.

M. J. CATON,

President, Proprietor and Founder of the EUCLID AVENUE BUSINESS COLLEGE and School of Short-hand, Mechanical Drawing, Elocution and Music.

The establishment of this institution will supply a long felt want to the people of Northern Ohio. Its special aims will be to prepare young men and women in the best manner, in the shortest time, and at the least expense for the profitable fields of active industry.

The college is located in the very center of the great business community of Cleveland, on the beautiful and world renowned Euclid Avenue. The college halls are carpeted throughout, heated with steam and lighted with both electricity and gas.

This is the most elegantly furnished and equipped Business College in the world.

YOUNG MEN, who are about to attend a business college, don't patronize an institution which is living on the reputation of men who are in no way connected with it. Patronize a reliable institution. The Euclid Avenue Business College has deposited a large sum of money with the Euclid Avenue National Bank, also with the Citizens' Saving and Loan Association of Cleveland, which will be security for students buying Life Scholarships. The Forest City Business College has been purchased by M. J. Caton and consolidated with this school.

For one of the most elegant circulars ever published address,

M. J. CATON,
88, 90 and 92 Euclid Avenue,
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Business University
552 Pearl St. Cleveland, Ohio.

The above Institution thoroughly believes in the doctrine of progress in educational methods, and acts upon that belief. When a new method or idea is brought into use by the business community it is the province of the Business College to introduce that method or idea into its course of training. We have no stereotyped methods; we impart no musty or gray-headed theories, but are ever on the alert to keep pace with the rapidly advancing times in which we are working.

All young men and women who desire to advance their own interests are cordially invited to investigate our facilities for imparting an educational training which shall better fit them for the duties of practical life. We have a practical course of study; an experienced and earnest faculty of specialists; an elegant suite of rooms, furnished with every appliance which is essential to the business office, well ventilated and pleasantly located; our terms of tuition are lower than those of other first-class schools; boarding and current expenses are reasonable, and we take pleasure in looking after the welfare of those placed under our care. Our school is patronized by an earnest and intelligent class of students from home and abroad.

Our penmanship department is presided over by a thorough master of his calling, who devotes his entire time to instructing in this department. Teachers training specially. Write for UNIVERSITY EXAMINER, containing further particulars and specimens of penmanship.

F. D. GORSLINE,

PRES. & PROP.
552 Pearl St., Cleveland, O.

ATTENTION!

For 7c per line the undersigned will furnish you an ALLEGORIC WHITTEN piece of poetry with an ELEGANT of your name. A complete MONOGRAM of the 26 capital letters will be sent as a premium with each order. All work warranted to please. Stamps received. Address:

J. G. ANDERSON,

FALCON, TENN.

TESTIMONIAL.

One of your Aerotypes written on a friend's name is the best present that could be given him. It will delight him more than a 55 on book or a gold-headed cane.

G. BIXLER,

WOOSTER, O.

SPECIAL.

CARDS—Good quality (for short time only) 15 cents per dozen; 25 for only 25 cents.

FLOURISHING.

PRICES—$x10, 20 cents, or 3 for 30 cents. Larger, prices 25, 30, 75c, and $1.00.

ENGROSSING.

Engrossing and display work of every description to suit customers. I make a specialty of this kind of work. My work is first-class, and prices reasonable.

A. E. DEWHURST, UTICA, N. Y.

COW-BOY.

Everybody should send One Dollar to J. R. McFARREN, 357, Grandview, Texas, and receive by return mail a copy of that wonderful Puzze Picture, entitled, "The Cow-Boy." Size, 2 1/2 inches. Agents wanted.

Send for Circulars and Description.

FOR CIRCULARS
of one of the MOST THOROUGH and COMPLETE INSTITUTION of the kind in America address

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

M. J. CATON, President and Founder.

BEAUTIFUL

SCRAP-BOOK SPECIMENS OF FLOURISHING!

Original in design and striking, bold and graceful in execution. They will be sent this month for 50c. With each of the first ten orders, when an extra stamp is enclosed, a beautifully written letter will be sent free of cost.

All kinds of pen-work promptly and artistically executed. Instruction given by mail. Cards written in superior style. Let me hear from you.

G. J. KRETCHMER,

Pen Art Herald Office,
CLEVELAND, O.

A GRAND SUCCESS!

Lessons in Pen Art by mail, 3 mos. course. Writing or Flourishing, $2.00. One lesson every month. Now students every mail. Test order, all kinds of work, 25c. 4 designs flourishing, size 10x12, in Indian ink, 50c. The first order, when an extra stamp is enclosed, will receive a circular ink design, size 10x12, 50c. 4 kinds of work. Successful orders will be published in HERALD. Try me and send today.

D. E. BLAKE, Gatesburg, Ill.

Circulars, etc., 25c stamp. L. B. 475

C. E. JONES'
LESSONS BY MAIL.

Automatic Penmanship.

This is no experiment. Success is certain to every one taking lessons who is willing to work. No student has failed yet, and I have had hundreds.

To my knowledge, no one else teaches Automatic Penmanship by mail.

The course is systematically arranged as far as possible, but the lessons must be varied in every case to suit the particular needs of each student.

This is one of the most beautiful kinds of pen work and is well known to the reach of everyone, certain, who will take 24 lessons.

Some have done beautiful work after six lessons. All copies are fresh from my pen.

PRICES.

12 Lessons.....	$3.00
24 Lessons.....	5.00
Alphabets, each.....	10
1 Handmade Motto, size 7x25 lettered and ornamented in a variety of colors.....	20
1 Automatic Shading Pen.....	25
5 Automatic Shading Pens.....	1.00
5 Assorted powders for making ink on paper.....	25
12 Ornamented designs.....	1.00
Cards, per doz.....	30

Address,

PROF. C. E. JONES,

TAOE, IOWA.

TESTIMONIALS.

Jones is one of the very finest Automatic pen artists.

The Western Penman.
The art of lettering with an automatic pen has been reduced to a fine point by C. E. Jones, Principal of the Business Department of the Tabor, Iowa College. Jones has also the peculiarity of imparting skill to others is attested by numerous specimens of the work of his students, which we have been permitted to see.

The Penman's Art Journal.
Specimens of automatic pen-lettering received from Mr. Jones are the finest we have ever noticed.

Ed. PEN ART HERALD.

THE BEST

Commercial
COLLEGE.

Book-keeping, Penmanship, Short-Hand, Type Writing, Normal Studies and Automatic Lettering.

Thoroughly Taught

AT THE NATIONAL

PEN ART HALL

AND

Business College

OF

DELAWARE, OHIO.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

MICHAEL'S PATENT

Oblique Holder.

Sold at all Book Stores.

Send for Price List of Michael's Compendium, Copy Books of Rapid Writing, Practice Paper, Black Ink, French Pens and Oblique Holders. The very best articles for Writing Schools and Public Schools.

Address,

G. W. MICHAEL &amp; CO.,

DELAWARE, OHIO.

STOP HERE!

ALL FOR A QUARTER!
A Specimens of Flourishing, your name written in 6 different combinations on cards, 4 flourished cards and 4 alphabets written with the Automatic Shading Pen, new styles, and combinations.

Your name written on 1 dozen cards in 4 different different ways, 20c. Can write any name in from 50 to 100 different styles and combinations. A few dashes of the pen in form of a bird, etc.; larger designs, 75c. and upwards. Send for them and all kinds of pen-work executed to order.

Address,
W. S. BOWMAN,
106 MAPLE ST., LYNN, MASS.

A SERIES ON LESSONS IN

Plain Writing

By H. J. Putnam and W. J. Kinsley.
SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
PRICE, FIFTY CENTS.

The copies are elegantly engraved on copper, printed from stone on the finest kind of very heavy plate paper. All copies new, uncolored. There are two parts.

Part I contains seventeen slips. These slips are not bound and are all devoted to plain writing. Every necessary copy is given.

Part 2 is the "Instruction Book" to accompany the slips. This is the most complete one ever given in connection with a work of this kind.

It contains chapters on "Materials," "Position" (giving cuts), "Form," "Movement," and "General Information." There are two lessons marked out. The slips and the "Instruction Book" are enclosed in a neat and substantial case.

TESTIMONIALS.

Prof. Wm. R. Patterson, Minister Alabama University, Marion, Ala.—"I am exceedingly well pleased with it and believe that if once introduced into this state it will have a large sale."

Prof. O. L. Lee, Prin. Yardeu, (Miss.) Male and Female Institute—"I have given it a careful examination and certainly am highly pleased. The copies are ornamental enough to be beautiful and yet plain enough to be easily and rapidly made. In my opinion, in many respects it meets the demands of the present tendency in business writing better than any system or publication. I shall be glad to use your system and recommend it to my students."

Agents wanted for every town and school. A liberal discount given. Collect all orders. "Compendium" on writing, send for a copy of the "Lessons" and sample.

Price, FIFTY CENTS. Stamps not taken.

Address either of the places named below that is nearest to you.

PUTNAM and KINSLEY,

P. O. BOX 38, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, IOWA
P. O. BOX 166, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Plain Writing

50 CENTS.

In answering this advertisement please do not forget to enclose a postal note for fifty cents and state clearly the number of the specimen you desire.

1st.—Scrap book specimen, embracing flourishing, writing and lettering.

2d.—Flourished bird on nest.

3rd.—Flourished swan with scroll work

4th.—Set of capitals with elaborate heading.

5th.—A design flourished in imitation of any copy you may send. Will send a personal letter with each order for any one of the above designs.

Address,

ANNA NINTIN,

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.

#No CIRCULARS.

"Pen &amp; Strokes"

IS FARLEY'S LATEST & BEST.

All who order the "GUIDE" within 30 days will receive a copy of "PEN STROKES" free.

REVISED. IMPROVED. ENLARGED.

THE MODEL

Guide to Penmanship

With Copy Slips on a New Plan.

Price of "Guide," 25c; "Pen Strokes," 15c. "Chirographic Edition," 10c; Price Specimens, 10c; Ornamental Specimens from the pen, 25c. When all are ordered at once, 75c. Address,

Dr. Farley

TRENTON, N.J.

515 East State Street.

CLEVELAND ENGRAVING CO.
DESIGNERS AND WOOD ENGRAVERS
308 SUPERIOR ST. CLEVELAND O.

Slow Writing is Dead.
NATIONAL CONTEST IN PENMANSHIP.
COLD, HONOR AND SUCCESS

Offered to the victors of the NATIONAL DIPLOMA OF RAPID WRITING, or Physical Training in Penmanship at their BEAUTIFUL DIPLOMA given free to every purchaser of BIXLER'S FIFTY DOLLARS IN GOLD AND A COPY OF THE DIPLOMA will be GIVEN FREE to all who take the best left hand and right hand writing. When using this plan of proceeding these gifts will be given to the student and his family. For better offers from our customers; hence, we can sell almost to give them and our system is introduced into every family. Hundreds of young men and women are making $20 a month by teaching our system in the evening, or selling our book. You can do the same. If the most remarkable item ever marketed. It proves that writing is a PHYSICAL EDUCATION and it gives you a THOROUGH CONTROL over the arm and fingers so that letters will flow from the pen as easily as water runs down hill. The book is beautifully bound in cloth and contains NINETEEN (19) ILLUSTRATIONS. It is the BEST SELF INSTRUCTION and yet the CHEAPEST work ever sold. We mail it postpaid for full price of the book for SIXTY CENTS, and present the gifts as stated above. No chance for dishonesty in our instructions which we mail with each book with show.

Bixler's Physical Training in Penmanship tells you all about ORGANIZING AND TEACHING CLASSES. By studying it for a short time you can easily make $20 a week teaching evening classes, or selling the book, and etc., and join our army of competitors. Improve your writing, make money, gain honor, and achieve success. PORTRAITS AND AUTOGRAPHS of successful competitors will appear in the leading papers and magazines. Send the money to:

C. BIXLER, Pres. American Pen Art Hall WOOSTER, OHIO. and Fine Art School.

NOW READY!

Five more Plates of Kibbe's Alphabets

No. 22. RAPID GERMAN TEXT. Made with a broad pointed pen, graceful and easy to execute. The best letter known for engraving names on diplomas, cards, &c.

No. 24. ROUNDED GOTHIC. A white faced letter, with dark background and flowers. Elaborate and suited to costly engraving. Two styles of finish shown.

No. 25. ARTISTIC RESTIC. Easy to execute, rapid, and the most artistic effect in rustic lettering ever produced. Money returned to anyone who will say that this plate is not worth the price of the five.

No. 26. CAMEO. For neatness and artistic effect, combined with ease and rapidity of execution, this alphabet leads the world. Count this engraving if you like after having examined the letter.

No. 27. SCROLLING LETTERS. Two styles of scrolls with appropriate lettering and ornamentation. Very artistic, and, if we mistake not, will please admirers of pen-work.

SINGLE NO. 10c. THE FIVE NOS. 25c.

INSTRUCTION BY MAIL.

BUSINESS WRITING. A Complete Course of Twenty-six Lessons in Business Writing, including all letters, figures and exercises fresh from the pen, with printed instructions, written for each lesson and explanation of the fore-arm movement and position, with illustration, will be sent for $2.

FLORISHING. A Course of Twelve Lessons in Flourishing including Principles, Birds, Eagle, Swan and prints for practice, fresh from the pen, with printed instructions and positions for holding the pen illustrated, will be sent for $3.

GOOD PENS. We are selling immense quantities of Gillott's 601 & F. Pens because they are the finest product of the best Pen Makers in the world, and give universal satisfaction. One-fourth gro. 25c. One gro. 85c. Two gro. $1.50.

Address,

H. W. KIBBE, Utica, N. Y.

Will be sent on receipt of..... $ .30
A specimen letter, to you personally..... .30
A sheet of combinations..... .30
A dozen cards..... .30
A lesson in flourishing..... .50
A price list of my work..... .02
All of the above..... 1.40

Address,

C. P. ZANIER, Columbus, Ohio.

The Automatic Shading Pen.
TWO COLORS AT A SINGLE STROKE.

THREE SIZES BY MAIL $1.00.

SAMPLE WRITING FREE.

J. W. STOKES, MILAN, O.

Fine Card Writing.

Having so many calls for my cards, I will offer to write them as follows:

12 Cards, with your name written in several varieties of style..... 25c
1 set of Cut Hand Capitals..... 25c
1 Elegantly Flourished Bird..... 25c

TESTIMONIALS.

"I believe your 'Behrenmeyer' to be the best penman in the world. If there is one to equal him, I don't know it. Few of the professionals of the day can equal him in style and capitals. A small order will prove this to anyone."—D. L. MYSTMAN, Quincy, Ill.

"Your writing is eminence, and would put to shame many of the best styled 'Lampsons.'"—W. H. FAIRBANK, Baltimore, Md.

"I cannot give all the praise for such a command of the pen."—F. N. HEATH, Espoon, N. H.

"I have no hesitation, whatever, in pronouncing you the finest penman of your age in the world."—B. B. MOORE, Morgan, Ky.

Address all orders to

H. P. BEHRENSMEYER,
Gen. City Business College, Quincy, Ill.
N. B.—Postal Cards go to the same basket.

DID YOU SEE IT

IT O?

PROF. C. E. JONES

TABOR, IOWA.

Wants to send you his 'Circulars and put your name on a card with the Automatic Pen, if you will send him a 2-cent stamp.

FIFTY CENTS

for complete outfit for beginners, consisting of one Automatic Pen, 2 ink powders, set of Alphabets, and complete instructions for beginners, all postpaid.

#SPECIMENS, 10 CENTS. 10

WANTED.—An experienced teacher of Commercial Branches for lucrative position in a flourishing Business College. State age, qualifications and salary expected, and address "Z," Pen Art Herald Office, Cleveland, O.

THE OBERLIN COLLEGE WRITING DEPARTMENT, AT MODERATE COST, THE VERY BEST BUSINESS TRAINING. IT IS progressive and thorough in all its appointments and departments, and is rapidly increasing in patronage and popularity. The Business Practice and Office Departments are not equalled in Ohio or surpassed in America, and contain a more complete business training than the entire course of many business colleges that claim to be among the best. Send for Commercial World to McKee & Henderson, Oberlin, Ohio.

THE OBERLIN COLLEGE WRITING DEPARTMENT is exclusively a School of Penmanship, and is without exception the very best in America. The specialty of this school is Teachers', Business Writers' and Pen Artists' Training. It also gives thorough drill on the Black Board.

OBERLIN ELECTIC SCHOOL OF SHORT HAND AND TYPE WRITING. Facilities the best. Teacher writes from 150 to 175 words a minute. Send for "STENOGRAPHIC WORLD," to MCKEE & HENDERSON, OBERLIN, OHIO.

1888. A HAPPY NEW YEAR. 1888.

"Ring out the Old" Trashy Works on Book-keeping; "Ring in the NEW" AND INTERESTING

WRIGHT'S BUSINESS METHODS

(Just Published.)

A COURSE OF PRACTICE IN MODERN DOUBLE ENTRY.

The Nearest Approach to Actual Experience

IT IS POSSIBLE TO GET, APART FROM BUSINESS.

It furnishes BUSINESS-LIKE TRANSACTIONS FOR TWO SETS OF BOOKS, explaining every detail from the opening to the closing, adjusting of the profits in one and losses in the other. Information that will qualify anyone for assuming full charge of a set of books at once, without first serving as an Assistant. Evidence: OVER THREE HUNDRED SUCCESSFUL BOOK-KEEPERS who knew nothing about Double Entry when they began this Course, and who are now holding honorable, responsible and lucrative positions throughout the country.

SYNOPSIS OF CONTENTS:

- I. We introduce and open a set of books—Proper arrangement of Columns in a group—Invest Cash in the business—Open the Partner's Capital accounts; also, an account for Cash, Expense, Office Furniture, and First National Bank—How to make a deposit—The sign of Debit and Credit in the bank account—How to dispose of Cash over and Cash short—How to prove the Cash—Importance of proving the Cash every evening—How to post from the Cash-book—How to close it.
- II. Buy goods on credit—Open an account with three creditors—When posting should be done—How to regulate space for Ledger accounts—How to arrange them for convenience—Lock Ledger explained—Customers' Ledger—Purchase Ledger—Sell goods on credit—Open an account with four customers—Importance of keeping the address of employees and others—How to post from the Journal and the Sales book.
- III. A customer settles by note—Open a Bills Receivable and a Discount account—Difference between a memorandum and an entry—Settle with a creditor by note—Open an account for bills payable—Charge up more goods—Requirements of the business suggest what accounts to open—Initials only necessary in posting—What regulates the dating of notes.
- IV. Receive the daily Cash—A customer settles in cash less the discount—Settle with a creditor by giving check on bank—Petty Cash—How to dispose of little items of expense—Open an account with a salesman—How to dispose of retailable—Five questions in proving Cash—Answers thereto—Five more in counting money in the drawer—Answers thereto.
- V. Discount a note at bank—Open interest account—Difference between interest and discount—How to find present worth of a note—A creditor draws on us at sight—Pay-day—Payroll explained—How to dispose of the matter when part of the employees are manufacturers—How to keep the bank account straight—Buy goods and settle for them by note—How to dispose of the matter when a new customer buys goods and settles by note—Business method versus Commercial College nonsense—Petit Accounts Receivable—Enter more goods.
- VI. Negotiate a loan at bank—How it is done—What regulates the rate of interest charged—Paying other people pursuant to instructions of a creditor for his account—Why checks should not be entered in Cash-book soon as drawn—A customer returns damaged goods—Another customer declines to pay for cash and cartage—What to do in each instance.
- VII. Two customers settle by note—How both are disposed of at the same time—We transfer one note to a creditor in part settlement—Buy more goods on credit—A creditor draws on us at 10 days sight—When the book-keeper would be permitted to sign the firm name—When he would not be permitted to sign it—Power of attorney—Absurdity of not allowing the book-keeper to indorse checks for deposit—Authentic signature—Circumstances alter cases—A sharp trick examined.
- VIII. Additional investment by one partner—Two customers request us to draw on them at sight—Their object—How we would proceed in the matter—Open an Exchange account—When and how to dispose of the differences that arise in cash settlements—Importance of being methodical—Buy goods C. O. D.—Importance of explanation in every cash transaction—Return of the transferred note—Counter entry—Buy more goods on time—When the year and month must appear on the books—How to enter goods sold C. O. D.—Exchange on New York.
- IX. Receive by the same mail a remittance from two customers, less discount—How to dispose of the matter when the money we receive includes a part that must be handed to another—An error due to negligence and lack of judgment—Pay two other creditors by giving check—Draw on a customer at 15 days sight—Charge up more goods.
- X. A customer remits on account—Pay our acceptance due this day—How it would be paid—Send a salesman on the road, advancing him money to pay expenses—Advantage in giving him a check for part of it—How to dispose of the matter—Why it would be wrong to charge it to his personal account—How he would get the check cashed when possibly 100 miles away—How to close the monthly Cash-book—How to explain the results—Open salesman's traveling account—How to close the Sales-book at the end of the month—An entry peculiar to the last day of every month on the Journal—How to close the Journal—Difference between giving and giving to give.
- XI. Trial Balance—How to proceed in making it—How to find errors in Trial Balance—Last Resort—A Trial Balance of the usual form showing the condition of the books if they have been properly written up—The usual rule for transportation of figures is the creation of the inexperienced—Red Ink Promises, veritable book.
- XII. Introduce a four-column Journal; also two Discount columns in the Cash-book—Pay more goods on account from three firms—Receive a remittance from two new customers, less discount—A point in financing—Pay a creditor by check, less discount—How to dispose of customer's bill—How we know his bill is correct—A wrong conclusion naturally drawn by the student—Inconspicuous, thou art not a jewel—Charge the same customers with more goods—How to read the peculiar entries on the Cash-book this month, and how to post them.
- XIII. Pay our first note which falls due this day—How it would be paid—Bank account overdrawn—Usual way of showing overdraft—When permitted to overdraw—How to make it good—The great advantage of getting our customers to give us notes—The unsatisfactory method adopted by many book-keepers—Discount several notes at bank—How to charge the bank account with the proceeds and restore it to its normal condition—How to dispose of the book-maker's bill.
- XIV. A customer's note goes to protest—What is meant by protest—Having discounted the note at bank we must pay it for our customer—Give the bank a check upon themselves—Bank account again overdrawn—Receive an apologetic remittance from a customer, less discount—Lend money on bank principles—An apologetic letter from a delinquent customer—Fabrication from wool cloth—Receive a new note in renewal of protested note, covering protest fees and interest—The business method of disposing of the matter; also the Commercial College method—Logic versus old fogies.
- XV. Receive a 100. note from a customer—Another customer calls in his note before it is due—How to withdraw a note previously discounted at bank and substitute another of different amount and different time to run—Theory versus practice—Why Business College methods are impracticable—Old fogies handled through gloves—Pay another note—Introduce two transient customers' accounts—Charge an employee with goods.
- XVI. Another note due to-day, which we renew—How to renew a note at bank—How to renew a note if held by private parties—Receive remittance for draft made on a customer, less exchange—A customer remits for two bills, less discount—Another makes a payment on account—How to contract a loss of discount.
- XVII. A customer falls and settles at 40 per cent—Open an account for Profit and Loss—Traveling salesman returns and accounts for the money advanced him—How to adjust it on the books—Why we prefer to make all payments by check—The junior partner draws money—The peculiar manner of closing the books this month explained—Adjust the interest on the senior partner's additional capital.
- XVIII. Trial Balance—The end of the season—Close the Ledger and adjustable profits—Show Assets, also Liabilities—Make a final balance sheet—Reopen the books, ready for a new year—Proof figures show the books have been written up correctly—Two precautions in single entry book-keeping, showing how to adjust the interest of each partner in the business—Simple, although but few care to it—Eugenic figures—Grand Coup de Grace.

This book will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of price, $2.50. If not satisfactory, RETURN BY FIRST MAIL, and your money will be promptly refunded.

Address,

F. A. WRIGHT, Author and Publisher,

769 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

THE PENMANSHIP HERALD

DEVOTED TO THE LITERATURE OF PENMANSHIP

Vol. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, FEBRUARY, 1888.

No. 6.

FIVE FAMOUS YOUNG CHIROGRAPHERS.

Prominent in the front row of American ink adjusters stand five young men, whose penmanistic attainments are worthy of universal notice and comment. Their names are familiar to most of the chirographic devotees, and there can scarcely be a question in any one's mind as to who they are.

Henry P. Behrens-meyer is about nineteen years of age. We remember first noticing his name mentioned in the Journal, several years ago, when he was at the Chaddock College of Quincy, Illinois. Later he became connected with the Gem City College, and is, without doubt, the finest penman that famous institution ever produced. He is employed as correspondent for that school. His writing is as graceful as the poise of a swan's neck, yet as accurate and thoroughly balanced as though cut on steel by a skilled engraver.

Henry's letters are always full of jollity and Bill Nye descriptions of his current pastimes or adventures, with an occasional reference to someone—a young lady, we think—who helps him enjoy the play occasionally. He prefers Kate Castleton comedy to Irving's Faust, chiefly because Irving or conversation, yet he carried with him a quiet, shy air and such a clear and piercing set of blue eyes that you would naturally desire to know more about him. Since that time we have had no more highly esteemed friend nor has the profession of penmanship a more beautiful writer in its ranks than Elmer W. Blosser, now of Delaware, O.

C. P. Zaner is a disciple of Michael. He teaches in the Business College at Columbus, Ohio, and, we learn, has lately started a school of his own. He is also booked as a lecturer on penmanship at the Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Commercial College; so, with his large mail business, we should suppose that he has few idle hours. As a constructor of poetical birds and other forms to which the flourisher confines his wanderings, Zaner has a reputation which is enviable. His flourishing is unlike that of any other penman, but his style is being widely imitated by amateurs. Much of the beauty of his work lies in the contrast between his light and shaded strokes. The finest specimen of his work ever published appeared in the October issue of the HERALD.

One night in the summer of '84 we were passing down the stairway of Michael's National Pen-Art Hall at Oberlin, Ohio, and became engaged in conversation with a pale, tall and sparsely constructed young man, who had outgrown, we judge, about seventeen successive almanacs. There was nothing remarkable in his appearance counts the fact that for about four months he rubbed elbows with and scattered ink at the same table occupied by the writer. The use of the word "beard" in connection with the name of Mr. Prince, it must be understood, is wholly figurative; he looks like a boy yet, but he has a dignified bearing and a firm, impressive style of conversation which at once disarms one of the supposition that he is a youth mentally.

The plain writing of our friend has attracted wide attention and elicited the enthusiastic admiration of competent and cultured critics.

repairs the student receives at Oberlin, confirmed and ordained him as a minstrel chirographic.

Bartow is a whole-souled, liberal and agreeable young man, and his penmanship has lately received many flattering encomiums. His specialties are writing and flourishing, in both of which he has few superiors, yet he does a very handsome piece of engrossing occasionally and makes the beautiful diplomas issued by the Ohio Business University, over the penmanship department of which he ably presides.

We may add that he is not yet twenty years of age. There are surely few young men with such bright prospects or possibilities in life.

ABOUT WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE.

We have recently been favored with a delightful call from our old teacher, Professor U. McKee, Oberlin, Ohio. The Professor is as genial and pleasant as ever, and reports great success in his school work.

C. P. Zaner seems determined to preserve his reputation as the leading flourishing artist of the profession. He does marvelously beautiful work in that line. His specimens are striking pictures, and would adorn any parlor collection.

H. F. Vogel seems to be doing well as a staff artist on the Chicago Graphic. He knows how to turn art accomplishments into money.

A. J. Scarborough is contriving to polish his editorial work on the "Magazine" to even an increased degree of brilliancy. One great beauty of his thoughts is the suggestiveness which accompanies them. It would seem unnatural to peruse a paragraph of his composition without catching a new breath of enthusiasm.

Professor G. W. Michael of Delaware, O., recently spent an afternoon at our headquarters. He seems to have lost none of his fire and determination. What Ingalls is to theology Michael is to the penmanship crusade.

The above strikingly beautiful design was engraved from the pen-copy of Prof. I. W. Patton, Olean, N. Y.

Prince is educated, ready-witted, entertaining and jovial. He has poetic ability and is a great lover of the drama.

S. Everett Bartow, a former country lad in a Buckeye settlement, some two and a half years since caught the writing fever, and in order to have the best of treatment the country afforded, walked in on an ambulance to the handsome school rooms of the Oberlin College Writing Department. Professor McKee administered a shower bath of muscular movement at frequent intervals each day, until the fever was diminished to a steady, healthful heat—an educated love for pen-art—which, coupled with the legions of other small lady in a Buckeye settlement, some two and a half years since caught the writing fever, and in order to have the best of treatment the country afforded, walked in on an ambulance to the handsome school rooms of the Oberlin College Writing Department. Professor McKee administered a shower bath of muscular movement at frequent intervals each day, until the fever was diminished to a steady, healthful heat—an educated love for pen-art—which, coupled with the legions of other small lady in a Buckeye settlement, some two and a half years since caught the writing fever, and in order to have the best of treatment the country afforded, walked in on an ambulance to the handsome school rooms of the Oberlin College Writing Department. Professor McKee administered a shower bath of muscular movement at frequent intervals each day, until the fever was diminished to a steady, healthful heat—an educated love for pen-art—which, coupled with the legions of other small

C. L. BRIMHALL.

A slightly defective likeness of whom is herewith presented, constitutes one in the great army of earnest, intelligent and ambitious young teachers of penmanship. He is principal of the St. Paul Institute of Penmanship, and is a successful representative of our profession.

For his skill and teaching ability in penmanship he is largely indebted to the counsel and aid of his instructor, the well-known left-hand writer of San Francisco, Fred O. Young, and to the help and encouragement he has received from his friend and associate, Professor N. S. Beardslee of the St. Paul High School. He does excellent work in plain writing, and is skilled in the ornamental branches.

The HERALD takes pleasure in being the first paper to present him to the fraternity through its columns, and bespeaks for him a full measure of success in his labors in the chirographic vineyard.

A PAYING INVESTMENT FOR THE COMMON SCHOOL TEACHER.

In looking over the long list of names representing the common school teachers of this country, we are led to ask the question: How many such teachers have a means by which they can increase their income, and at the same time not interfere with the regular school duties?

My fellow teacher, did you ever pause to consider how you might better your condition? You are always ready to protest against the littleness of your salary, and willing to acknowl-

Common school teachers are a necessity—the cause is a noble one, but, dear, oh dear, the pay—do you sigh as you think of it? If you love your work, stick to it; but why not devise some means by which you can advance your income as you plod along, step by step, into good old age and fame?

A teacher's training course, of from three to six months, in some well established, reliable school of penmanship will prove a profitable investment to any live teacher—which will yield a greater income than any investment you ever made, considering the capital and time required.

You are ready to ask: How will such an investment pay? Become a good few plain figures will fully explain my meaning. Suppose you secure a night school of twenty pupils (this is a small estimate), at two dollars each for fifteen lessons, five lessons per week. Thus we have forty dollars for three weeks work of one hour per day. This we must count as clear gain, as the board and incidental expenses are already figured out of the regular salary.

If you are wide-awake and put life in your work the first term, a much larger class will be ready for a second series of fifteen lessons without your solicitation. Do you see what I mean?

A PAYING INVESTMENT? Suppose a three months' course in penmanship costs you seventy-five dollars,

CAVCE PEN ON BUSINESS WRITING.

SVB BISSON, Business Writing Union:

MY DEAR SIR:—It becomes more and more apparent that the efforts of some to hoist upon the public what they are pleased to christen "Business Writing," tend to lead to the neglect of the finer points of penmanship and by paying increased attention to speed in the vain effort to comply with the standing request of "rapid America," to "please get a little faster," they are overrunning some very valuable game. Did it ever occur to your mind that many of the schools throughout the country most clamorous against the work of the writing master are themselves notoriously deficient in facilities for turning out skilled penmen? And that these same schools are continually denouncing that which they themselves uphold in other ways than by short courses? Did you ever stop to consider the rapid and long strides penmanship has made within the last decade and the character of work which brought about this change? Did you ever fully consider the true inwardness of this business writing idea and how many of its advocates were once eager to climb the ladder leading to skill and fame, and how many of these are now the avowed enemies of every idea tending to what is denominated the artistic in penmanship, to say nothing of those continually on the change from one side to the other and back again, not particularly benefiting either? Did you ever consider the various and varying theories of these enemies of progress in penmanship, and who of them are contributors of matter that has caused not even a single ripple on the sea of chirographic literature?

CAVCE PEN.

edge that you do not receive one-half what your services are worth. In what other calling is the pay so small, where the preparation required, and the responsibility so great, as that of the common school teacher?

The young man or woman who is teaching a common school for thirty, or even fifty dollars per month, will, by close economy, save enough by the expiration of the winter and spring terms to pay his expenses at some school during the summer vacation, where he must go in order to "keep up with the times" and be able to pass the much appreciated examination for a certificate that he may wield the reins of authority "next year."

penman, and your services will be in greater demand and at higher wages. By being the happy possessor of a fine style of penmanship, you will be raised in the estimation of all with whom you come in contact. By being able to teach a good system of penmanship you can organize night and Saturday classes and make as much as your regular salary, and in many instances do much better. During the summer vacations teachers of penmanship are always in demand, and the energetic penman will always secure private pupils at a good rate of tuition.

There is not a village or community where large night classes could not be organized during the winter months. A this amount to cover all expenses—tuition, board and room, materials, etc. In the first month after graduating you make at least as much as your course in penmanship cost you. Is such a course not a good paying investment?

My brother, wake up! Consider your best interests and act wisely. Spend your vacation in a way that will bring happiness and good returns in the form of big round dollars.

Yours truly,

C. N. CRANDLE.
Dixon, Ill., Feb. 15, 1888.

A large number of our friends have kindly promised clubs for the HERALD. May not we add your name to the list?

Mr. H. B. Parsons, Principal of the Business College at Zanesville, Ohio, favors us with a photo of an engrossed set of resolutions recently designed and executed by himself, which appears to be an exceedingly clever piece of artistic penwork. The designing is very original and equally meritorious, while the execution of the work betrays evidence of a master's touch and finish.

BARNES' SOUVENIR is one of the most artistically gotten up publications in its line—Penmanship. The work is very replete with peerless gems of pen-art, the engraving having been done by Holah.

Show the HERALD to your friends.

SHORT BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF R. C. WOOD.

BY W. G. EMERSON.

Professor B. C. Wood, of the firm of Wood & Van Patten, principals and proprietors of the Iowa Commercial College, Davenport, Iowa, was born in one of the rural districts of Chickasaw county, Iowa, December 12, 1858. His parents were among the early pioneers of Iowa, were well educated and highly respected people. Their pioneer home, with open fire-place, was noted far and wide for its cheerful and cordial welcome to friends and neighbors, who for some years were miles apart; still the latch string of their humble home was ever on the outside.

Here in this country home the subject of our sketch grew from childhood to early manhood, working on a farm from early morn till late at night in summer seasons and attending country school during winter. Early in life his untiring energy at whatever he set himself about was a matter of comment among older people. At twelve years of age he was a good English scholar, at fifteen availed himself of an opportunity to attend a grammar-school for six months, boarding at home, taking care of stock mornings and evenings, and riding a horse a distance of four miles to school. Thus season followed season and year succeeded year until, at the age of seventeen, young Wood, like the sensible young man that he was, decided to attend a commercial college. The opportunity came, as it does to all who are determined, and the following winter found him a student of the Decoral Business College. But spring came and found our hero out of funds, and the course not yet completed. He therefore very reluctantly bade adieu for the time being, to his alma mater, and began teaching country school until he had accumulated sufficient lucre to pay his expenses at college again, returning to Decoral and remaining until he secured his diploma as a professional "Knight of the Quill."

Now his efforts were crowned with success, and mapping out his field he began the life of an itinerant writing teacher, traveling several counties of Iowa, and occasionally going over its borders. His success as a teacher was so pronounced and appreciated that he determined to be an educator. Fully imbued with this idea he entered the "Decoral Institute," under the principalship of Professor Breckenridge, and with his accumulated means was enabled to complete the course with honors. Returning to his rural home and spending a few days with his parents, he then went to Moline, Illinois, where he secured a position as clerk in a store, and subsequently an acquaintance was formed with Miss Bertha A. Way, a young lady of rare culture and refinement, and possessed of many charms. The acquaintance ripened into friendship, and from friendship the "old story" was again told, and October 26, 1880, they were united in marriage. From this union a little boy and girl bless and gladden their home.

In 1881 young Wood's superior business ability and qualifications were recognized by R. G. Dun & Co.'s Mercantile Agency, Davenport, Iowa, and a position offered him, which he accepted. There is, perhaps, no other one business that so thoroughly qualifies a man in the practical as a mercantile agency. The subject of our sketch early recognized this and applied himself with his usual untiring energy and remained with the same agency for three years. Resigning his position he immediately founded the Davenport Short-Hand and Type-Writing Institute, which met with marked success. A few months later it was his good fortune to meet Professor Frank Van Patten, a gentleman of scholarly attainments, and also a practical educator. Professor Van Patten became associated with the institute founded by Mr. Wood, and shortly thereafter they merged it into the Iowa Commercial College, since which time the never doubted for a moment that success eventually would crown his efforts.

The ladder of fame that rests on the foundation of meritorious conduct has already several rounds below where Professor Wood stands to-day.

As a teacher of rapid calculation and business writing there perhaps is not a superior to him in the world. His wonderful rapidity in figures has astonished men of all classes, and causes him to be looked upon as a mathematical phenomenon, while his penmanship and black-board writing excites the admiration of all who see it.

The Western Penman's Association, held at Des Moines, December 27 to 30, 1886, honored Professor Wood by electing him assistant secretary of the convention for the year 1887. Retiring from this office, he was made chairman of the executive committee for the year one of comfort and true refinement. He is happily constituted for his avocation, a merry wight, full of vim, vigor and tirelessness, generous, prompt, courteous and ready-witted, counts his friends by the hundred and his word is as good as a bond.

The fond remembrance of the writer carries him back to the days when young Wood was struggling manfully to prepare to carry out the noble resolve of earlier days. As the years come and go, we know we shall see still greater works emanating from the tireless hands of the subject of this sketch.

HONORS FOR OUR FRIEND
KELLOGG.

We gladly insert the following tribute of respect to a worthy young penman:

At a meeting of the students of the Anoka Business College, held in the college rooms February 6, 1888, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Prof. H. H. Kellogg has resigned his position as teacher in the Anoka Business College; therefore be it Resolved, That we deeply feel the loss of one whose simple life, unselfish devotion, and unswerving fidelity to duty have endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

Resolved, That as a teacher of penmanship and commercial branches he possesses superior ability, being a very forcible and practical teacher, and while we shall greatly miss him, we feel he will gain many friends wherever he may go.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to him, and a copy sent to each of the penman's papers for publication.

P. U. GILSON, }
D. S. WALKER, } Committee.
V. M. LAPHAM, }

ANOKA, Minn., Feb. 15, 1888.

By Prof. H. W. Benton, Penman in the Business College at Harper, Kansas.

wonderful success the college has had is a by-word all over eastern Iowa and western Illinois.

Professor Wood, from boyhood up, has had varied experiences, but he has, without demonstration to the world the possibilities of a poor farmer boy—he is in every sense of the word a "self-made man," and the job was well performed. His indomitable will and tireless energy have done much toward bringing the Iowa Commercial College to its present standing, ranking, as it does, as one of the leading Commercial Colleges in the land.

Not only is Professor Wood an educator of rare qualifications and superior ability, but he is also a natural leader of men—he knows no such word as 'fail.' His resolve to be an educator of the rising youth was made ten years before he had the supreme satisfaction of seeing his ambitions realized, but during all this time he 1888, and the association will hold its next meeting in Davenport, at the Iowa Commercial College. The Association will, doubtless, be entertained in a right royal manner. Professor Wood will greet the fraternity so warmly that all imaginary icebergs which may have existed will melt away, and the brothers will look about and find themselves in the midst of a warm, social sunshine. No penman will be exempt from the next meeting.

Perhaps in the whole field of business college men there are few, if any, who are so well qualified to manage and direct young men and women as Professor R. C. Wood. That he stands as a prince among business educators is acknowledged by his hundreds of graduates throughout the country.

Professor Wood is benevolent, enterprising and public spirited. He finds time to attend church, and his home is QUERIES BY S. R.

WEBSTER.

What movement is best adapted to the varied conditions incidental to a business life in securing uniform work?

Since the masses are often called to write independent of the stationary rest, should they not be prepared for such emergencies by school room drill under that condition? Can the muscular movement be practically employed when the writer is deprived of the stationary rest?

If the muscular movement can be thus employed, what is the objection to preparatory work in the whole arm movement?

If it cannot be thus used, what is the objection to preparatory drill in finger movement?

The above are practical questions and furnish material for interesting and profitable discussion.

Gaskell's Magazine is always good—a basket of concentrated sunshine. The "Penman's Gallery" is a specially interesting feature, as the writing of the biographies allows ample opportunity for the free play of brother Scarborough's characteristic wit and brainy drolery.

The Pen-Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature.

Subscription price: Sixty cents per year. Single numbers, ten cents each.
 See our Premium Offers on page 6.
 Do not send money when postal note can be obtained.
 Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 inch	1 month	$2	3 months	$5
3 "	1 "	4 "	3 "	10 "
3 1/2 "	1 "	8 "	3 "	20 "
1 "	1 "	12 "	3 "	30 "

CLUB RATES:
5 to 10	Fifty-five cents each.
10 to 25	Fifty cents each.
25 to 50	Rates made known on application.

These rates include the "Alphabets" as premium.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every business or other kind of school in the land, to act as our representative, and to solicit subscriptions and advertisements for the HERALD. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 320 PEARL STREET.
 W. D. SHOWALTER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER
 Mrs. W. D. Showalter, Associate.
 Cleveland, Ohio.

Entered at the Post Office at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class matter.

AT OUR THOUGHT-EASEL.

It is not wise to lose sight of the fact that every acquirement should be of such a nature that it can be utilized. Go where you will in the world of business and you will find that those who are successful are invariably the persons who can turn accomplishments, mental or physical, to some account—consecrate them to some purpose. An accountant who can make a journal entry only when his mind may be as clear and unclouded as that of a student, or when reference books are at hand; a journalist who can write only when in the mood for literary work; an artist who can only draw the circles and principles learned in school, or an orator who is lost without his manuscript, would prove fully as marked successes in their different lines of work as would the so-called business writer who is unable to adapt his "hand" to the exigencies of a hurrying, rushing age, and the commercial transactions which every day must be recorded.

Teachers of penmanship should study the law of adaptability. They should be architects, and in planning and building for their students a hand-writing, they should learn in mind the uses to which it is expected that it shall be subject—the subsequent molding it must undergo.

We are always glad to speak of and commend a good idea when we see it, and for that reason cannot refrain from calling especial attention to Mr. Frederick S. Heath's highly praiseworthy undertaking, the particulars of which may be gleaned from his advertisement. There is not a professional in the land but has, at some time in his life, felt the need of a reliable and complete directory of the members of our calling. It will serve manifold purposes. Efforts to produce works of the kind before have failed, because of the lack of knowledge of our profession, its extent and growth, on the part of those who have essayed to do the work. Mr.

Heath is a young gentleman of rare intelligence and ability; he is perfectly familiar with the affairs of our calling, and is sparing no effort to make his Directory not only extensive and comprehensive, but reliable and modern, the addresses given to be up to date. He should have the help of every live penman or teacher.

COMPLAINTS.

Some of our subscribers become indignant unless they find their names in the HERALD each month. We frequently receive letters, the contents of which are steeped in agitated mental temperature, unbending the sad tale of our neglect in this regard in language less soothing than emphatic.

To all of our esteemed fratres who feel that the HERALD has failed to do them justice or that it has in any manner neglected their interests, we reverently apologize. It is our constant aim to fly to receive and advance the professional interest of our calling; and to best perform this work we recognize that it is wise to institute a sort of social club room, where, each month, members of our brotherhood may meet on common ground, learn of imagine that we have ceased to exist, or anything else so utterly improbable.

THOSE WHO CLUB THE HERALD.

To our generous friends who have shown their thoughtfulness for the HERALD's welfare during the past month by sending such handsome lists of subscribers to it, we desire to extend our sincere thanks. Appreciation can be shown in various ways, but we are safe in saying that an editor prefers this method to almost any other. It is encouraging to think that the HERALD, while yet an infant, has enlisted the hearty friendship and support of so many of the substantial members and prominent teachers of our profession.

Professor W. J. Kinsley, the whereabouts and profession of whom need no rehearsal, heads the list by a club numbering sixty-four. This surely is no faint indication of the esteem in which he is held by his students, from among whom the subscribers were taken.

Professor U. McKee, Oberlin, O., of the quality of whose attainments few people in our ranks are ignorant, forcibly illustrates his attachment to the HERALD rolled as a friend to our enterprise, and convinces us of his sincerity by sending a club of subscribers.

Our friend J. C. Witter, special penmanship instructor in the Leche Graded Institute, New Orleans, La., sends us a club of fourteen. Mr. Witter is one of the leading penmen of the south; is a gentleman of clear and forcible views, practical ideas and sound judgment on all matters pertaining to the good of our cause. The HERALD has no more enthusiastic admirer than he. He favors us with some new and effective designs in pen-drawing, which prove, conclusively, that he is intimately acquainted with the habits of the pen.

Professor J. B. Duryea, in order to be up with the times and in fashion, sends a club of seven.

C. C. French, Bayless Business College, Dubuque, Iowa, has our thanks for a club of nine.

Our old friend Blosser of Delaware, O., sends a club of sixteen, merely to make the fact apparent to us that he likes the HERALD.

E. M. Barber, Wichita, Kan., swells our list by a club of four.

Professor H. J. Putnam, one of the most accomplished commercial teachers of the northwest, favors us with a club of seventeen. Who can do as well?

Mr. A. T. Hastings, a fine practical writer and a pupil of our friend Isaacs of Valparaiso, Indiana, sends us a club numbering twenty. Mr. Hastings will soon embark as a professional penman, and we have all confidence in his success, as he has shown us conclusively that he has energy, love for the work, and skill.

Mr. Jesse Overlock, Rockport, Maine, a practical book-keeper and an excellent writer, donates a handsome club this month.

J. M. Adams of Scio, Ohio, sends a goodly club and promises a better one in the future.

H. F. Crumb, Rider's Business College, Trenton, N. J., a live, practical teacher, has persuaded seven of his pupils that the HERALD is essential to their future happiness.

Numerous smaller clubs have reached us, which space forbids mentioning in a special manner. Thanks, all round.

STAMPS.

When it is possible to obtain postal notes or to send currency or silver without danger of loss, we very earnestly request all who make remittances to the HERALD not to send stamps. When compelled to do so, however, we ask that you send one's or two's, as we have little use for those of any other denomination.

Isaacs is busy. With about six hundred penmanship pupils to instruct daily, it is not to be wondered at that he finds little time for reading serial stories, or for attending base ball games.

All of our advertisers are reliable.

The above is photo-engraved from copy prepared by Prof. C. N. Grandle, Penman in the Northern Indiana Normal College, Dixon, Ill. Prof. Grandle is an expert penman in all branches of the art.

the whereabouts and success of other toolers, and gain a new breath of inspiration for their own labors. This we attempt to do through the personal notices which appear in our columns.

As there are thousands whose work deserves especial mention in our columns, it should not, we are inclined to think, subject us to a severe epistolary lecture when someone who has been looking for a "mention" is unintentionally omitted.

It is not always possible for us to obtain engravings on time so our paper is frequently out later in the month than we could wish. As this fact cannot possibly cause any serious inconvenience to anyone, we wish that when we fail to reach their post-office box before the twenty-fifth or a few days later, subscribers would not by sending a club of fifteen, this being the second list received from him lately.

Professor S. J. Pridden, the penman of Moore's Business University, Atlanta, Ga., sends us a club of twenty-five, simply to show us that the paper is liked by his students.

Professor W. A. Hoffman of Bryant's College, Chicago, makes us a present of a club of eight.

The same statement describes the conduct of Mr. B. Butler of the Chicago College of Business and Penmanship.

Messrs. C. E. Jones and C. E. McKee have formed commendable habits in the way of sending subscribers at odd times.

Mr. H. H. Kellogg, Principal Penmanship Department of the Anoka, Minn., Business College, and associate editor of the Practical Educator, desires to be en-

ORNAMENTAL PENMANSHIP.

ARTICLE NUMBER 3.—BY ANNA NINTIN, GRAND ISLAND, NEBRASKA.

No one can hope to excel in ornamental penmanship without first acquiring the ability to make graceful flourishes, and this skill can, we believe, be easiest acquired by constant practice on an exercise similar to the flourished portion of the accompanying design.

In preparing this specimen of work we first made the circular portion with a compass, next putting on all the flourishes. Then came the horseshoe, and for it we were compelled to draw wholly on our imagination, as we were unable to find a picture of one, and if it is not a correct representation, we hope some of our friends who have seen a real, live horseshoe will correct us.

To make the horseshoe and flowers, sketch them carefully with a pencil, then retrace with a pen, finishing the flowers first.

SOMETHING OF COMMON INTEREST.

In our next issue we shall give a large number of cuts of envelope cards and letter headings, the originals of which were executed with the pen. We believe this will prove of general interest, and in order to make it so, we earnestly invite all professional penmen, amateurs and all colleges, penmanship institutes and other schools using pen-work designs for headings or business cards to mail us an electro of whatever they see fit to furnish, at the earliest possible date. Due credit will be given on each case and the cuts returned at our own expense when off the press. No charge will be made, and it is not difficult to see that this is a chance to secure some valuable advertising without cost. Send our cuts at once, please.

OUR SEMI-ANNUAL ANNIVERSARY.

The PEN-ART HERALD is now six months old. The first number was issued in September, '87, and since that time it has appeared with becoming promptness and regularity each month, circulating in every corner of our country. The growth of our paper and the popularity it is enjoying is fully equal to the highest expectations of its editor and projector. We are not rich, nor are we in any great danger of becoming so while devoting our efforts to the work of penmanistic journalism, yet we believe we are doing good, and we have complete faith in the ultimate financial success of the HERALD. It is paying its way, and that is more than we expected at the beginning.

We desire to assure our generous constituents that the HERALD has no notion of dying. During our short career thus far nothing has hindered our prosperity more than the impression which many you can send us ten, the service will find a proportionate appreciation and more substantial evidence of it than mere words convey. May we not enroll you as a permanent friend and supporter of our journal?

OUR JOURNALISTIC WORLD.

The last number of the Western Penman is the finest yet published. The full page pen-drawings by Kibbe and Webb are superb.

The Michigan Business Journal, of which the famous penman, Professor City, Iowa, contains a good lesson in writing by P. T. Benton, Penman in the Business College at that place.

The School Visitor, Madison, Wisconsin, visits us twice a month. It is a bright little sheet and contains much substantial reading.

PERSONALS.

We have a young man in the profession of penmanship whose skill is something bordering on the remarkable, yet his extreme modesty keeps him behind the scenes to a great extent. We hope to present a map of his features, taken from a photographer's survey, in an early issue, and tell our readers how he obtained his skill. We refer to Professor W. A. Hoffman, now of Bryant's Chicago Business College.

L. M. Kelchner of Light Street, Pennsylvania, sends us a striking specimen of flourishing.

J. F. Haederle, Cleveland, hands us a card written in an unusually good style for a young man of seventeen.

J. V. DeCremier of Green Bay, Wisconsin, mails us a packet of well executed penmanship. He is fast scaling the chirographic heights.

C. W. Jones is teaching at Emporia, Kansas.

Professor J. H. Harrison, a competent teacher and excellent penman, is teaching writing itinerantly throughout the "Buckeye" State.

C. M. Weiner sends us a specimen of his flourishing in bird and branch form, labeled "Harmless." We must say that it is splendid, however harmless it may be. Mr. Weiner's HERALD is addressed to South Whitley, Indiana.

Miss Lida M. Dan

els, a school preceptress at Seneca, Ohio, is getting her students interested in the subject of penmanship and in penmen's papers—which shows conclusively that she knows what progress means.

J. F. Cozart, Ravenswood, Emporia, Kan., favors us with a beautiful piece of flourishing, done in imitation of ZANER'S peerless style.

A. J. Smith of Anamosa, Iowa, adds some valued—because skillful—specimens to our collection of pen work. Mr. Smith will soon embark on an itinerant—and we ask him to carry on his person the HERALD's best wishes.

Send us your school catalogue. We want to see what you are doing.

By Miss Anna Nintin, Grand Island, Neb., whose lesson it was made to illustrate.

have that because it is young it is unsafe to patronize it. There can be no risk whatever in lending it your every possible aid, as the financial foundation upon which it rests is fully as firm as that of older journals of penmanship.

And now, as we enter upon the second half of our first year in your homes, we earnestly ask you to deal by us justly and according to our merits. If the HERALD's visits have helped you, we trust you will lend us your aid in placing it in the hands of every one of your pupils and friends whom you feel that it would benefit. If you can send us one additional subscriber, be assured that the favor will be appreciated. If

W. W. Bennett, Principal of the Business College at Grand Rapids, Michigan, is editor and publisher, the second number of which has just reached our table, is the brightest and best publication emanating from any college within the radius of our observation.

In this last issue Mr. Bennett has garnered an unusually bright and glittering array of thought-jewels. We learn that his institution is meeting with the most flattering success, as it doubtless merits. The HERALD congratulates the Professor on his general prosperity, and indulges the hope that it may only increase as the years creep on.

A neat College Journal, from Iowa

A LESSON ON THE CAPITAL LETTERS.

BY THE EDITOR.

Mr. Walden's set of capitals on this page will be found valuable for thoughtful, careful practice. The style and size of the letters are about as you would make them after having studied varied forms and numerous systems of script letters. In practicing them, experiment for yourselves in regard to the movement best suited to this style of writing. Take up a letter and try to produce it with every movement of which you have ever heard, and adopt that one which to you seems most sensible for the purpose. This, you will probably conclude, is the muscular.

In practice, always note the relative position of every stroke; the gradation of the shade and the style of motion which produces the most dignified and graceful forms.

and a packet of ten of Kibbe's Alphabets, the best aids to skill in artistic penmanship in existence. This set includes three of Mr. Kibbe's latest alphabets, and in it are several handsome plates of variety writing. Farley's Model Guide may be ordered instead of the alphabets, for a short time.

TEN.

This month we shall make a special reduction on clubs of TEN each, where no premium is desired. For a limited time we shall receive subscribers in clubs of that number or more at forty cents each.

Are there not, in your classes or among your friends, at least ten who would appreciate a live penman's paper to the extent of forty cents a year?

All who are willing to make an effort to secure this special number are requested to write us at once, and we shall take pleasure in sending any de-

An aggravating error occurred last month in the full page advertisement of P. A. Wright. Through an oversight the price of Mr. Wright's book was made to read $2.50 instead of $1.50, the actual price. The work would be cheap, however, at the price given. No progressive book-keeper or teacher should be without a copy.

G. Bixler is "nothing if not progressive." His school at Wooster is prosperous. Notice his "ad." and see why we call him progressive.

Scarborough seems serene and happy under "Home Rule," and is growing more and more earnest and forcible in his journalistic labors. For an indefinite period of years may his good-natured eloquence pour through the "Magazine's" columns.

The new plates of Kibbe's Alphabets are beauties. Don't fail to see them.

There has rarely been a more successful penmanship publication than "A Series of Lessons in Plain Writing." Nothing sells like it since the palmy days of Gaskell's Compendium. It deserves full the success with which it is meeting.

C. O. Meux is teaching penmanship in Nelson's Business College, Memphis, Tennessee. He is a good writer and a live young man.

We learn, from a reliable source, that Professor C. C. Curtis, of Minneapolis, conducts one of the finest schools to be found anywhere. Should the growth of his institution be parallel with that of the city in which it is located, we are justified in predicting unexampled future prosperity for this popular college.

Professor E. E. Stevens is doing well with his Pen-Art at Wauson, Ohio. He is an accomplished writer and teacher, and deserves a full measure of success.

ST. PAUL INSTITUTE

PENMANSHIP!

The best instruction given in Practical and Ornamental Penmanship. Card Writing and all kinds of Penwork to order.

Send for specimens of Flourishing, - 25c.
1 doz. neatly written cards, - - 25c.

C. L. BRIMHALL,
PENMAN.

49 East 4th St., ST. PAUL, MINN.

COW-BOY.

Everybody should send One Dollar to J. R. McFARREN, 357, Guaranty, Texas, and receive by return mail a copy of that wonderful Puzzle Pen-Picture, entitled, "The Cow-Boy." Size, 3x2 1/2 inches. A great wonder.

Send for Circulars and Description.

FOR CIRCULARS
of one of the MOST THOROUGH AND COMPLETE INSTRUCTIONS of the kind in America address

Euclid Avenue
Business College
Cleveland, Ohio.
M. J. CATON, President and Founder

C. E. JONES'
LESSONS BY MAIL.
Automatic Penmanship.

This is no experiment. Success is certain to every one taking lessons who is willing to work. No student has failed yet, and I have had hundreds.

To my knowledge, no one else teaches Automatic Penmanship by mail.

The course is systematically arranged as far as is possible, but the lessons must be attended in every case to suit the particular needs of each student.

This is one of the most beautiful kinds of pen work and is within the reach of everyone, certain, who will take 25 lessons.

Some have done beautiful work after six lessons. All copies are fresh from my pen.

PRICES:
12 Lessons.....$3.00
24 Lessons.....5.00
Alphabets, each......15
1 Handsome Motto, size 7x20 lettered and ornamented in a variety of colors.....25
1 Automatic Shading Pen.....25
5 Automatic shading (assorted).....1.00
5 Assorted papers for making ink for quill.....25
12 Ornamented designs.....1.00
Cards, per doz......30

Prof. C. E. Jones,
Tabor, Iowa.
TESTIMONIALS.

Jones is one of the very finest Automatic pen artists.

The Western Penman.
The art of lettering with an automatic pen has been reduced to a fine point by C. E. Jones, Principal of the Business Department of the Tabor, Iowa College. That he has also the faculty of inspiring skill to others is attested by numerous specimens of the work of his students, which we have been permitted to see.

The Penman's Art Journal.
Specimens of automatic pen-lettering received from Mr. Jones are the finest we have ever noticed.

Ed. PEN ART HERALD.

THE BEST

Commercial
COLLEGE.

Book-keeping, Penmanship,
Short-Hand, Type Writing,
Normal Studies and Automatic Lettering.

Thoroughly Taught
AT THE NATIONAL PEN ART HALL

AND

Business College

OF

DELAWARE, OHIO

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

MICHAEL'S PATENT

Oblique Holder.

Sold at all Book Stores.

Send for Free List of Michael's Compendium, Copy Books of Rapid Writing, Practice Papers, Black Ink, French Pens and Oblique Holders. The very best articles for Writing, Schools and Public Schools.

Address,

G. W. MICHAEL & CO.,
DELAWARE, OHIO.

ATTENTION!

For 75 per cent the undersigned will furnish you an ELEGANTLY WRITTEN piece of poetry with an ACROSTIC of your name. A complete MONOGRAM of the 20 capital letters will be sent as a premium with each order. All work warranted to please. Stamps received. Address,

J. G. ANDERSON,
JACKSON, TENN.

TESTIMONIAL.

One of your Acrostics written on a friend's name is the best present that could be given him. It is a delight him more than a $5.00 box or a gold headed cane.

G. HIXLER,
WOOSTER, O.

This set of Capitals is by Prof. L. R. V. Allen, Principal Business College, Austin, Texas.

Investigate! Find the easiest way of making a letter and stick to it. Find out if it is as easy to omit all shade as to use it. See if there are any lines which are superfluous and with which you can easily dispense. Make a set of capitals half as large as the copy and one twice as large, choosing the style which seems most practical for business, and the one which seems the most beautiful for the finer styles of penmanship. Ever strive to find some better idea, some improved way of doing things, and you will never grow weary of practice.

PREMIUMS.

ONE DOLLAR, currency or postal note, secures a yearly membership in the HERALD's family and the most popular and meritorious publication on plain writing extant—Putnam & Kinsley's "Lessons," a description of which may be found in their advertisement.

SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, postal note or silver, pays for a yearly subscription sired number of samples to be used in soliciting. Let us hear from all of our friends in regard to this matter.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

D. E. Blake makes some inviting offers in this issue. He is one of the expert pen manipulators of the west, and may be relied upon.

Professor F. S. Heath, late of Portland, Maine, has resigned his position there, and will occupy the itinerant field during the coming season—opening at Concord, New Hampshire. He writes us that his proposed work—the Penman's Directory—will be pushed to completion as soon as the desired data can be obtained.

G. J. Kretschmer of Cleveland is doing some very skillful work in the various lines of pen-art, and is destined to stand second to none if unimpaired ambition can avail.

W. W. Bennett reports a large enrollment of students in his new school at Grand Rapids, Michigan. He will hereafter publish the Michigan Business College Journal each month. The first two numbers are very creditable ones.

ING. Facilities the best. Teacher writes
ENDERSON, OBANTIN, OHIO.

A SUCCESS!

The PENMAN'S DIRECTORY will be a success. The live men in the profession everywhere are leading their art, and saying that such a work is needed, and will be of great value to the penmanship pupil. A larger amount of matter has been received BUT MORE IS WANTED. It is the aim to present a short sketch of every professional penman in America. Material for nearly one hundred sketches is already at hand, including many excellent penmen who have never before had sketches published. Many more ought to furnish material to make the work complete. Shall I not hear? Hundreds of students ought to send in their names and addresses, thus making the work particularly valuable to penmen and others who wish to send out circulars. Come, hurry; it costs you nothing. Another department which ought to be made interesting and valuable is the catalogue of business colleges. Write me telling the number of pupils, of teachers, when established, and in short, all about your school. The writer will pay for the time and trouble. I earnestly appeal to every business college proprietor, every penman, and every student to aid me in making the most complete work of the kind ever published. It cannot fail to benefit all whose names or sketches appear, for a large number will be printed and circulated everywhere. It shall be gotten up with a sole aim to set forth the state of the profession. Will you respond?

In addition to sketch, any cut of penmanship, portrait or autograph desired for that purpose, will be printed. Help me to make it beautiful as well as useful.

To advertisers: A space will be reserved for choice advertisements. No letter medium can be found, for it will be a work which will be kept for years. A large edition will be printed. All in all, no amount of money can afford not to invest at least a cut. Business college advertisements especially solicited.

One inch, 50 cts.; 2, 90 cts.; 3, $1.00. 1/2 column, 10 cts.; 1 column, 20 cts.; 1 page, $1.00. No of copies about 1000. Send me your order.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

A SERIES OF LESSONS IN

Plain Writing

By H. J. Putnam and W. J. Kinsley.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

PRICE, FIFTY CENTS.

The copies are elegantly engraved on copper, printed from stone on the finest kind of very heavy plate paper. Each copy, 50 cts.; 2, 90 cts.; 3, $1.00. 1/2 column, 10 cts.; 1 column, 20 cts.; 1 page, $1.00. No of copies about 1000. Send me your order.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

The work will be ready as soon as possible, and matter for publication must be sent in at once. E. C. HEATH, Grosseville, N. H.

EDUCATE FOR BUSINESS

Cleveland, O.

The business of EDUCATING FOR BUSINESS is here made a constant theme of study. Our course is stripped of every needless theory and includes only the VITALS of a useful training. Those interested in Mechanical or Architectural Drawing should investigate the advantages of our

Cleveland, O.

It is in charge of a practical draftsman. Our terms are within the reach of all, and our facilities THE BEST. One of our specialties, in which we claim to possess unequalled teaching talent, is

Penmanship

Five superior penmen in our faculty. What school can show such an array of chirographic talent? Send for free copy of UNIVERSITY EXPOSITION.

F. D. GORSLINE, President,

502 PEARL STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

YOUNG PENMEN

Who Possess a Reasonably Good Degree of Skill in Penmanship.

May easily, honestly and speedily turn that skill to a MONEY PRODUCE CAPITAL by acting upon the following suggestions.

You possess a good hand-writing, and you doubtless know how you acquired it, and can give such directions and copies to others as will serve to make the learner's road less beset with difficulties for him than it was for you. In every farming or village community there are a few young people who could be easily made to take a short course of lessons by mail, if proper instructions were offered them. You can, with a very few dollars, thus found a school of penmanship by mail, and by issuing neat and attractive circulars, containing appropriate and well gotten-up matter, addressing them in your best style of penmanship, and sending them to all of your interested acquaintances and earnest young men and women, school teachers and others, whose addresses are easily obtained, you can, in a short time, enroll as many students in your FINEST PENSHPENSHIP ACADEMY as are in attendance at many of our leading commercial schools. This will not only pay you handsomely, but will give you valuable experience in teaching and will result in what counts to build future achievements.

We shall be glad to assist any young penman who may conclude to try this plan, in writing up attractive circulars or advertising matter, and, to our readers and friends, will make but a trifling charge for our services. We have done considerable work of this kind, and have always given satisfaction. If you wish our assistance in this line, please write us giving particulars and we shall be pleased to give you our best efforts and lowest rates. All correspondence and work of this nature is considered strictly confidential. Let us hear from you.

Your friend,

W. D. SHOWALTER,

Editor PEN ART HERALD.

Cleveland, Ohio.

BUSINESS COLLEGE PRINCIPALS,

And penmen generally, who may need our service or aid in getting up attractive advertising matter, are invited to correspond with us. We would be glad to give you our best efforts and lowest rates. All correspondence and work of this nature is considered strictly confidential. Let us hear from you.

Cuts and engravings or electros of same may be ordered through us and the lowest rates secured, consistent with the best work that can be obtained.

Write us for "anything you wish in our line."

W. D. SHOWALTER,

Cleveland, Ohio.

A GRAND SUCCESS!

Lessons in Plain Art by mail, 3, 6, 9, 12, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85, 90, 95, 100, 105, 110, 115, 120, 125, 130, 135, 140, 145, 150, 155, 160, 165, 170, 175, 180, 185, 190, 195, 200, 205, 210, 215, 220, 225, 230, 235, 240, 245, 250, 255, 260, 265, 270, 275, 280, 285, 290, 295, 300, 305, 310, 315, 320, 325, 330, 335, 340, 345, 350, 355, 360, 365, 370, 375, 380, 385, 390, 395, 400, 405, 410, 415, 420, 425, 430, 435, 440, 445, 450, 455, 460, 465, 470, 475, 480, 485, 490, 495, 500, 505, 510, 515, 520, 525, 530, 535, 540, 545, 550, 555, 560, 565, 570, 575, 580, 585, 590, 595, 600, 605, 610, 615, 620, 625, 630, 635, 640, 645, 650, 655, 660, 665, 670, 675, 680, 685, 690, 695, 700, 705, 710, 715, 720, 725, 730, 735, 740, 745, 750, 755, 760, 765, 770, 775, 780, 785, 790, 795, 800, 805, 810, 815, 820, 825, 830, 835, 840, 845, 850, 855, 860, 865, 870, 875, 880, 885, 890, 895, 900, 905, 910, 915, 920, 925, 930, 935, 940, 945, 950, 955, 960, 965, 970, 975, 980, 985, 990, 995, 1000, 1005, 1010, 1015, 1020, 1025, 1030, 1035, 1040, 1045, 1050, 1055, 1060, 1065, 1070, 1075, 1080, 1085, 1090, 1095, 1100, 1105, 1110, 1115, 1120, 1125, 1130, 1135, 1140, 1145, 1150, 1155, 1160, 1165, 1170, 1175, 1180, 1185, 1190, 1195, 1200, 1205, 1210, 1215, 1220, 1225, 1230, 1235, 1240, 1245, 1250, 1255, 1260, 1265, 1270, 1275, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 1300, 1305, 1310, 1315, 1320, 1325, 1330, 1335, 1340, 1345, 1350, 1355, 1360, 1365, 1370, 1375, 1380, 1385, 1390, 1395, 1400, 1405, 1410, 1415, 1420, 1425, 1430, 1435, 1440, 1445, 1450, 1455, 1460, 1465, 1470, 1475, 1480, 1485, 1490, 1495, 1500, 1505, 1510, 1515, 1520, 1525, 1530, 1535, 1540, 1545, 1550, 1555, 1560, 1565, 1570, 1575, 1580, 1585, 1590, 1595, 1600, 1605, 1610, 1615, 1620, 1625, 1630, 1635, 1640, 1645, 1650, 1655, 1660, 1665, 1670, 1675, 1680, 1685, 1690, 1695, 1700, 1705, 1710, 1715, 1720, 1725, 1730, 1735, 1740, 1745, 1750, 1755, 1760, 1765, 1770, 1775, 1780, 1785, 1790, 1795, 1800, 1805, 1810, 1815, 1820, 1825, 1830, 1835, 1840, 1845, 1850, 1855, 1860, 1865, 1870, 1875, 1880, 1885, 1890, 1895, 1900, 1905, 1910, 1915, 1920, 1925, 1930, 1935, 1940, 1945, 1950, 1955, 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2000, 2005, 2010, 2015, 2020, 2025, 2030, 2035, 2040, 2045, 2050, 2055, 2060, 2065, 2070, 2075, 2080, 2085, 2090, 2095, 2100, 2105, 2110, 2115, 2120, 2125, 2130, 2135, 2140, 2145, 2150, 2155, 2160, 2165, 2170, 2175, 2180, 2185, 2190, 2195, 2200, 2205, 2210, 2215, 2220, 2225, 2230, 2235, 2240, 2245, 2250, 2255, 2260, 2265, 2270, 2275, 2280, 2285, 2290, 2295, 2300, 2305, 2310, 2315, 2320, 2325, 2330, 2335, 2340, 2345, 2350, 2355, 2360, 2365, 2370, 2375, 2380, 2385, 2390, 2395, 2400, 2405, 2410, 2415, 2420, 2425, 2430, 2435, 2440, 2445, 2450, 2455, 2460, 2465, 2470, 2475, 2480, 2485, 2490, 2495, 2500, 2505, 2510, 2515, 2520, 2525, 2530, 2535, 2540, 2545, 2550, 2555, 2560, 2565, 2570, 2575, 2580, 2585, 2590, 2595, 2600, 2605, 2610, 2615, 2620, 2625, 2630, 2635, 2640, 2645, 2650, 2655, 2660, 2665, 2670, 2675, 2680, 2685, 2690, 2695, 2700, 2705, 2710, 2715, 2720, 2725, 2730, 2735, 2740, 2745, 2750, 2755, 2760, 2765, 2770, 2775, 2780, 2785, 2790, 2795, 2800, 2805, 2810, 2815, 2820, 2825, 2830, 2835, 2840, 2845, 2850, 2855, 2860, 2865, 2870, 2875, 2880, 2885, 2890, 2895, 2900, 2905, 2910, 2915, 2920, 2925, 2930, 2935, 2940, 2945, 2950, 2955, 2960, 2965, 2970, 2975, 2980, 2985, 2990, 2995, 3000, 3005, 3010, 3015, 3020, 3025, 3030, 3035, 3040, 3045, 3050, 3055, 3060, 3065, 3070, 3075, 3080, 3085, 3090, 3095, 3100, 3105, 3110, 3115, 3120, 3125, 3130, 3135, 3140, 3145, 3150, 3155, 3160, 3165, 3170, 3175, 3180, 3185, 3190, 3195, 3200, 3205, 3210, 3215, 3220, 3225, 3230, 3235, 3240, 3245, 3250, 3255, 3260, 3265, 3270, 3275, 3280, 3285, 3290, 3295, 3300, 3305, 3310, 3315, 3320, 3325, 3330, 3335, 3340, 3345, 3350, 3355, 3360, 3365, 3370, 3375, 3380, 3385, 3390, 3395, 3400, 3405, 3410, 3415, 3420, 3425, 3430, 3435, 3440, 3445, 3450, 3455, 3460, 3465, 3470, 3475, 3480, 3485, 3490, 3495, 3500, 3505, 3510, 3515, 3520, 3525, 3530, 3535, 3540, 3545, 3550, 3555, 3560, 3565, 3570, 3575, 3580, 3585, 3590, 3595, 3600, 3605, 3610, 3615, 3620, 3625, 3630, 3635, 3640, 3645, 3650, 3655, 3660, 3665, 3670, 3675, 3680, 3685, 3690, 3695, 3700, 3705, 3710, 3715, 3720, 3725, 3730, 3735, 3740, 3745, 3750, 3755, 3760, 3765, 3770, 3775, 3780, 3785, 3790, 3795, 3800, 3805, 3810, 3815, 3820, 3825, 3830, 3835, 3840, 3845, 3850, 3855, 3860, 3865, 3870, 3875, 3880, 3885, 3890, 3895, 3900, 3905, 3910, 3915, 3920, 3925, 3930, 3935, 3940, 3945, 3950, 3955, 3960, 3965, 3970, 3975, 3980, 3985, 3990, 3995, 4000, 4005, 4010, 4015, 4020, 4025, 4030, 4035, 4040, 4045, 4050, 4055, 4060, 4065, 4070, 4075, 4080, 4085, 4090, 4095, 4100, 4105, 4110, 4115, 4120, 4125, 4130, 4135, 4140, 4145, 4150, 4155, 4160, 4165, 4170, 4175, 4180, 4185, 4190, 4195, 4200, 4205, 4210, 4215, 4220, 4225, 4230, 4235, 4240, 4245, 4250, 4255, 4260, 4265, 4270, 4275, 4280, 4285, 4290, 4295, 4300, 4305, 4310, 4315, 4320, 4325, 4330, 4335, 4340, 4345, 4350, 4355, 4360, 4365, 4370, 4375, 4380, 4385, 4390, 4395, 4400, 4405, 4410, 4415, 4420, 4425, 4430, 4435, 4440, 4445, 4450, 4455, 4460, 4465, 4470, 4475, 4480, 4485, 4490, 4495, 4500, 4505, 4510, 4515, 4520, 4525, 4530, 4535, 4540, 4545, 4550, 4555, 4560, 4565, 4570, 4575, 4580, 4585, 4590, 4595, 4600, 4605, 4610, 4615, 4620, 4625, 4630, 4635, 4640, 4645, 4650, 4655, 4660, 4665, 4670, 4675, 4680, 4685, 4690, 4695, 4700, 4705, 4710, 4715, 4720, 4725, 4730, 4735, 4740, 4745, 4750, 4755, 4760, 4765, 4770, 4775, 4780, 4785, 4790, 4795, 4800, 4805, 4810, 4815, 4820, 4825, 4830, 4835, 4840, 4845, 4850, 4855, 4860, 4865, 4870, 4875, 4880, 4885, 4890, 4895, 4900, 4905, 4910, 4915, 4920, 4925, 4930, 4935, 4940, 4945, 4950, 4955, 4960, 4965, 4970, 4975, 4980, 4985, 4990, 4995, 5000, 5005, 5010, 5015, 5020, 5025, 5030, 5035, 5040, 5045, 5050, 5055, 5060, 5065, 5070, 5075, 5080, 5085, 5090, 5095, 5100, 5105, 5110, 5115, 5120, 5125, 5130, 5135, 5140, 5145, 5150, 5155, 5160, 5165, 5170, 5175, 5180, 5185, 5190, 5195, 5200, 5205, 5210, 5215, 5220, 5225, 5230, 5235, 5240, 5245, 5250, 5255, 5260, 5265, 5270, 5275, 5280, 5285, 5290, 5295, 5300, 5305, 5310, 5315, 5320, 5325, 5330, 5335, 5340, 5345, 5350, 5355, 5360, 5365, 5370, 5375, 5380, 5385, 5390, 5395, 5400, 5405, 5410, 5415, 5420, 5425, 5430, 5435, 5440, 5445, 5450, 5455, 5460, 5465, 5470, 5475, 5480, 5485, 5490, 5495, 5500, 5505, 5510, 5515, 5520, 5525, 5530, 5535, 5540, 5545, 5550, 5555, 5560, 5565, 5570, 5575, 5580, 5585, 5590, 5595, 5600, 5605, 5610, 5615, 5620, 5625, 5630, 5635, 5640, 5645, 5650, 5655, 5660, 5665, 5670, 5675, 5680, 5685, 5690, 5695, 5700, 5705, 5710, 5715, 5720, 5725, 5730, 5735, 5740, 5745, 5750, 5755, 5760, 5765, 5770, 5775, 5780, 5785, 5790, 5795, 5800, 5805, 5810, 5815, 5820, 5825, 5830, 5835, 5840, 5845, 5850, 5855, 5860, 5865, 5870, 5875, 5880, 5885, 5890, 5895, 5900, 5905, 5910, 5915, 5920, 5925, 5930, 5935, 5940, 5945, 5950, 5955, 5960, 5965, 5970, 5975, 5980, 5985, 5990, 5995, 6000, 6005, 6010, 6015, 6020, 6025, 6030, 6035, 6040, 6045, 6050, 6055, 6060, 6065, 6070, 6075, 6080, 6085, 6090, 6095, 6100, 6105, 6110, 6115, 6120, 6125, 6130, 6135, 6140, 6145, 6150, 6155, 6160, 6165, 6170, 6175, 6180, 6185, 6190, 6195, 6200, 6205, 6210, 6215, 6220, 6225, 6230, 6235, 6240, 6245, 6250, 6255, 6260, 6265, 6270, 6275, 6280, 6285, 6290, 6295, 6300, 6305, 6310, 6315, 6320, 6325, 6330, 6335, 6340, 6345, 6350, 6355, 6360, 6365, 6370, 6375, 6380, 6385, 6390, 6395, 6400, 6405, 6410, 6415, 6420, 6425, 6430, 6435, 6440, 6445, 6450, 6455, 6460, 6465, 6470, 6475, 6480, 6485, 6490, 6495, 6500, 6505, 6510, 6515, 6520, 6525, 6530, 6535, 6540, 6545, 6550, 6555, 6560, 6565, 6570, 6575, 6580, 6585, 6590, 6595, 6600, 6605, 6610, 6615, 6620, 6625, 6630, 6635, 6640, 6645, 6650, 6655, 6660, 6665, 6670, 6675, 6680, 6685, 6690, 6695, 6700, 6705, 6710, 6715, 6720, 6725, 6730, 6735, 6740, 6745, 6750, 6755, 6760, 6765, 6770, 6775, 6780, 6785, 6790, 6795, 6800, 6805, 6810, 6815, 6820, 6825, 6830, 6835, 6840, 6845, 6850, 6855, 6860, 6865, 6870, 6875, 6880, 6885, 6890, 6895, 6900, 6905, 6910, 6915, 6920, 6925, 6930, 6935, 6940, 6945, 6950, 6955, 6960, 6965, 6970, 6975, 6980, 6985, 6990, 6995, 7000, 7005, 7010, 7015, 7020, 7025, 7030, 7035, 7040, 7045, 7050, 7055, 7060, 7065, 7070, 7075, 7080, 7085, 7090, 7095, 7100, 7105,

THE PENMAN'S JOURNAL

DEVOTED TO THE LITERATURE OF PENMANSHIP

MONTHLY, VOL. I.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, MAY, 1888.

No. 10.

CASUAL REMARKS ABOUT A SUCCESSFUL MAN.

A PENMAN WHO HAS PREACHED, AND A PREACHER WHO HAS PRACTICED.

Although principally known as a BUSINESS EDUCATOR, of the sturdily cultured sort, Prof. C. Bayless of of Dubuque, Iowa, is, in fact, a many-sided, largely versatile gentleman, who can fill the pulpit of the Presbyterian elder; who can detect an error in a trial balance in less than five minutes and in business and social habits or customs in still less time; who can talk church, conduct a prayer meeting, make a speech or tell a story; conduct a complete and successful school of business and explain and illustrate the relative merits of pencil and machine stenography, with seemingly equal facility and adeptness.

Naturally of an industrious, persevering, acquiring stock, he has cultivated such a level head for business, such well balanced views on themes of human import, and such an unflinchingly honest and open-hearted nature, that the universal respect of those who pass his way is his rightful inheritance.

Prof. Bayless, as we have known him for some years, is a tall, refined, impulsive and conscientious man, the very soul of life, earnestness, and broadly conservative in most things; a connoisseur in music and art, an and a lover of home life. His school is always prosperous and is so because it always deserves prosperity. His home is one of the pictures which linger in the minds of all so fortunate as to be a guest there. Its ease luxury of appointment is second only to the heart-touching cordiality of its host and hostess, and the merry talk of little Birdie, a bright eyed, precocious young lady of about six or seven, callenders and the dignified, polished presence of Vincent, a quiet, cultivated young man of twenty-three, now a law student in the University of Michigan, lend beauty to the atmosphere of that model home.

DONOR!D CITIZEN

Prof. Cornelius Bayless, President and Founder of Bayless Business College, Dubuque, Iowa.

No one evinces a more intelligent interest in the young men of our country and calling than Prof. Bayless. A young penman, ambitious to find the coveted trail of success—to many, THE LOST TRAIL—never seeks or heeds his counsel in vain or without profit.

In our round of acquaintances few

Prin. H. C. SPENCER'S ALPHABET.

BY S. R. WEBSTER, GENEVA, O.

With reference to the alphabet, the appearance of which, in the August number of the Penman's Art Journal has drawn out the criticism of some ness Educator's Association, or at least forms upon which the largest number agreed as being their first choice, and hence whatever merit the alphabet possesses, touching the style of letters represented, must necessarily redound to the honor of the penmen who submitted their reports, and, too, they must be accounted responsible for whatever inconsistencies appear therein.

To reap a full benefit of a consideration of this subject, we recommend the reader to refer to the August number of the Journal and observe the forms given; and if his is the eye of an artist, he will see at a glance that there is certainly a lack of unity in the alphabet, especially in the capital-ten letters. But what does this condition signify? To my mind it simply justifies the conclusion that there is, on the part of a majority of the penmen who reported their choice, a lack of due appreciation of unity in the exercise of individual taste in modifying forms. Then Mr. A's taste may lead him to adopt certain modifications of the capital "I" for a rapid business hand, and for the same purpose he uses a capital "G" the modifications of which are not in harmony with those of the capital "I" and so in Mr. A's alphabet may be found the basis of a dozen distinct alphabets, each of which if constructed would be harmonious in itself, but at variance with each other. An illustration of this incongruity of styles may be found in the two letters just mentioned in the plate referred to, also observe Band R of the same plate.

I do not reverence this alphabet as bearing the approval of the leading of to-day, neither do I understand it as coming under a recommendation of Mr. Spencer as a standard to be universally adopted as business forms. It is given as a result of his effort to present forms representing the first choice of the profession, and judging from the result it is clearly evident that all of those who submitted their choice have not reached the pinnacle of perfection in the broad field of harmony and unity of forms.

If Mr. Spencer's philanthropic nature should materialize as a benefactor to the profession by presenting plates representing the first, second and third characters present so many elements which enter into the preacher's, the poet's and the bible's ideal of a MAN. A steadfast friend to the HIRALD, he encourages our work by material and ethical aid, subscribers and advice. He has faith in our success and does his part to assure it.

The above is some of the neatest work in designing and lettering ever executed with the pen. H. W. KIRBY is the artist who did it.

of our brother penmen, I wish to say that I do not see in what sense it can be properly termed H. C. Spencer's Alphabet. The plate there represents the first choice of a ruling percent of the penmen, who had reported to Mr. Spencer at the time he submitted his report to the Bas-choice of the fifty penmen who indicated their preferences, I imagine many amusing surprises would be in store for us at the expense of some of the stars of chirographic fame; but as the undertaking would be an expensive one they are doubtless protected. I feel that he should be commended, however, for opening a channel through which so many of our penmen may reach a higher development of good taste, and the attainment of a greater degree of consistency in the adaptation of forms to the laws of balance and motion without destroying unity.

LESSON IN BUSINESS WRITING.

BY W. D. SHAWALTER.

We have chosen, as an illustration in business writing for this month's issue, and as a valuable and suitable copy for practice by students, the Business Form, given on this page, the original copy for which a thorough business man and a fine business writer, Mr. E. L. Williams, President Business Educators' Association of America, has the honor of having prepared.

We suggest that the student rule his practice paper suitable for the copy, and endeavor to make every effort a successful one. This will afford you practical practice outside the writing drill. There is little use of practicing writing with a position of body and limbs which prevents a free and unobstructed use of the writing muscles. Due attention to preliminaries should always be given, followed by continual repetition and never-give-up effort to acquire just what your better judgment tells you is Business Writing.

Write the copy not less than 200 times during the month, and so measure the nature of each effort that the next shall be a big step ahead. Do not make a slow motion; use the pen with dexterity, but allow yourself to become so familiar with the territory over which the business writer's mind and pen must glide that not an illegible letter may be found in your page.

Acquire that sort of hand-writing which is not frightened away when you are compelled to double your speed. Get that style for which business men will give you cash, in goodly bulks.

PENMEN OF AMERICA.

CHAS. WASHBURN, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. C. STANBISH, Buffalo, N. Y.
H. A. STORREY, Rockford, Ill.
W. J. ELLER, Stratford, Ont.
J. M. LAMZ, Emmitsburg, Md.
C. L. BROWN, St. Paul, Minn.
F. C. GOSWELL, Cleveland, O.
B. C. WOOD, Dayton, Ohio.
L. D. BLAKE, Galshburgh, Ills.
C. C. FLETCHER, Dubuque, Iowa.
C. S. CHAPMAN, Des Moines, Iowa.

Photo-Engraving from lithograph, the original of which is the work of the renowned H. W. Shawalter, Portland, Me.

O. K. CAMPBELL, Oberlin, O.
C. M. WEINER, So. Whitley, Ind.
F. S. HEATH, Gosville, N. H.
T. NELSON, Cleveland, O.
L. J. GRAVE, Cleveland, O.
E. J. SMITH, Cleveland, O.
G. J. KUTCHALL, Cleveland, O.
H. T. Loomis, Cleveland, O.
L. M. KEEHLER, Cleveland, O.

B. H. SPENCER, Albany, N. Y.
E. W. BLOSER, Delaware, O.
G. S. KIMBALL, Delaware, O.
G. E. NETTLETON, St. Louis, Mo.
G. A. HAYMON, Ft. Worth, Texas.
I. W. PATTON, Olean, N. Y.
S. A. DRAKE, Erie, Pa.
E. L. GLECK, Grand Rapids, Mich.
C. A. FAYET, Chicago, Ills.

"SOUND SENSE."

When we feel dull, and our chirographic spirits run at low ebb, we are forming the habit of opening a drawer in which we find a neat packet of copy-pennmanship, prepared by the admirable penman, Prof. W. H. Patrick, Baltimore, Md., who advertises this self same set in this issue at a very reasonable rate. Penmen as well as students should have them.

The Meadville, Pa., Business College favors us with an elegant card of invitation to the 23rd Annual Commencement of that institution. Many thanks, and our regrets; an editor rarely travels, you know, as passes are out of date.

KNEITL EXPLAINS.

To the Editor of "Pen and Art Herald."

Stratford, May 10, '88.

DEAR SIR:

My offer of ten dollars a month ago for the last specimen of penmanship sent to me, has not called out the responses I would like to see. The month has expired and I am in receipt of only five letters. I think penmen cannot reasonably object to my postponing the closing of the competition for fifteen days in order to give some who may not have observed my offer, a chance to compete. The offer is BOX-A-FIDE and money waits.

Yours truly,

E. J. KNEITL.

Stratford, Ontario, Canada.

Boston Mass. Dec 16, 1887
Messrs. Good & Austin & Son
Carroll, Va.
Bought of J. R. Jamison & Co.
Dry Goods Importers and Dealers

A NEW ARRANGEMENT.

The editor of the HERALD is but a young man, yet he has had several successful years of school-room experience, and has studied, devised, experimented, searched, dreamed of and delved in the mines of thought for new ideas, practical methods and effective ways of teaching writing.

As a result, many lively and successful methods have found access to his store-house of mental chinties, and as some of them are of such a nature that they cannot well be presented in the HERALD, the editor will tell of them in a series of twelve correspondence lessons, or twelve letters, to any penman who is in earnest about his work and of an inquiring mind. For a dollar, and twelve stamps,

Write today.

W. D. SHAWALTER.

An illustration from the new work on "Grammar and Composition," the copy for which was written by a co-author of that excellent book, Prof. L. L. Williams, Rochester, N. Y.

M. SYRE, Cleveland, O.
W. J. CHURIST, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
J. W. EVERT, Elmora, O.
F. H. CUBBER, Whitewater, Wis.
W. A. HOFFMAN, Chicago, Ill.
J. T. PRACY, Des Moines, Ill.
E. C. HYKERT, Oregon City, Ore.
D. L. STUBBINS, Colorado City, Col.
L. H. HENRY, Elkhart City, Cal.
P. T. BROWN, Iowa City, Iowa.
J. G. HENDERSON, Lexington, Ky.
L. H. HANSEN, Ft. Scott, Kas.
R. C. MOSE, Alto, Texas.
E. J. KNEITL, Stratford, Ont.

O. C. DORSEY, Alton, Ark.
C. E. MCKEE, Columbus, O.
A. G. CONNOR, Arbinson Kan.
H. W. BREKER, York, Neb.
E. L. BARKER, Providence, R. I.
G. B. JONES, Rochester, N. Y.
CHAS. O. MILX, Memphis, Tenn.
Connected with Business College.

This list will be continued in our next issue.

Sent in live, burning thoughts, called from the class-room, for publication.

During the last few months we have prepared copy for circulars and advertising matter for a number of young penmen. During the summer months we shall be prepared to do considerable more of this work at low rates. Write us for what you wish, and we'll try to please you. We understand about the nature of attractive penmanship advertising, and will guarantee to meet your wishes.

Prof. H. B. PARSONS.

The HERALD's family includes hundreds of bright names,—names which are synonymous with progress in penmanship and practical education; yet among the long list, none shine with a more healthy lustre than that of Prof. H. B. Parsons, Principal of the Zanesville, Ohio, Business College, a specimen of whose penmanship lends artistic polish to the third page.

Our knowledge of Prof. Parsons, aside from a professional acquaintanceship, is limited, but we have every reason to believe that his life, in a social way, is fully as refined as his skill in penmanship.

The Professor has lately executed some of the finest and most elaborate pieces of engrossing for the G. A. R., which are to be found in the lists of pen-art productions.

The photos advertised in this issue are treasures of which the penmanship student may well be proud. We would not part with those in our possession for many times the price asked for them.

His engrossing style has more originality and personality in it than that of any pen-artist with whose productions we are familiar.

LOST ITEMS.

To omit mention of the fact

That Fred H. Criger, Whitewater, Wis., is, to put it as mildly as our enthusiasm over his penmanship will allow, a magnificent writer, or

That W. H. Patrick's pen-work is pure gold, or

That R. S. Collins is waylaid with orders for his picture-like work, or

That E. J. Kniel will announce the winner of the $10 prize in our June issue, or

That E. L. Brown ought to advertise his penmanship, or

That A. E. Downhurst will appear in the HERALD's photograph and biograph album soon, or

That a penman's art collection is behind the times without the photos of pen-work advertised by Mr. H. B. Parsons, or

That future numbers of the HERALD will be brighter and better in proportion as you drop in the dollars and subscribers more and more frequently, or

That Webster's article in this issue is set with thought-diamonds,

Would be an injustice to those concerned and to our growing army of readers.

SHORT-HAND.

A young man with an excellent general education, and a first-class teacher, will be ready to accept a position as Stenographer, Type-Writer and teacher of the popular Eclectic Short-hand, at an early date. Correspondence solicited. Address,

"A"

PEN-ART HERALD, Cleveland, O.

This is the first article design the HERALD has had the pleasure of presenting. To the young penman it is a source of artistic display designs in ornamental penmanship. The photo, which is from Prof. H. B. Parsons's pen, will be found at stated value.

The Pen-Art Herald

A Monthly Journal of Penmanship Literature.

Subscription price, Sixty cents per year. Single numbers, Ten cents each.

Don't send stamps when postal note can be obtained

Remittances should be made by Postal Note or Registered Letter.

ADVANTAGING RATES:
1 inch, 1 month, $2. 3 months, $5. 1 year, $12
2 " " 4 " " 10 " " 20 " " 25 " " 35 " " 50 " " 100 " " 100 " "

CLUB RATES:
5 to 10, Fifty-five cents each.
10 to 25, Fifty cents each.
25 to 50, Rates made known on application.

We desire to engage some reliable person—a student or teacher—in every Business or other kind of High School in the land, to act as our representative and to solicit subscription and advertisement for the HERALD. Write us at once.

Office of Publication, 52 PEARL STREET.
W. D. SHAWALTER, Editor and Publisher.
Mrs. W. D. Shawalter, Associate,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Entered at the Post Office at Cleveland, Ohio, as second class mail matter.

WHY.

Our action in discontinuing the recent WEEKLY edition of the HERALD and in again reverting to the old monthly, may seem, to many of our readers, rather peculiar. The only explanation necessary to be made is, that the WEEKLY was not a success; we fought hard for it, and had implicit faith in its ultimate triumph, but after losing considerable money, patronage and good will of many of our adherents, we concluded that, for the sake of our hardly attained reputation in the penmanship field, we must acknowledge our mistake and try to rectify it. Accordingly, we continue the old MONTHLY, drop the WEEKLY, and promise a far better periodical than ever before.

Now that we are showing ourselves anxious to meet your wishes, may we not have some tangible showing of your appreciation each month?

Is there not some way in which you can aid this paper? Have you friends or pupils who would be benefited by the HERALD's rays of sunshine? And will you not take a half hour of your time this afternoon and see about it?

Have you not some business or article which it would pay you to advertise? And will you not favor us with that part of your patronage?

We shall be glad to hear from every reader of the HERALD during the month of May, and whether you are able to send us aid or kind words, write us and we shall indefinitely remain

Your debtor,
THE EDITOR.

THE BUSINESS COLLEGE WORLD.

The great need of the American Business College is TEACHERS: men who have not only that theoretical knowledge which is so requisite in an instructor, but who have come in contact with BUSINESS MEN, and know how to minister to them. It is a discouraging fact that many of these young men who compose the faculty of the average Business College are ignorant of methods of doing business and adhere, tenaciously, to the directions given in some text book, while, with but trifling inconvenience to themselves, they could obtain, daily, glimpses of that world, for usefulness in which, they pretend to educate their students. The Business College and business world are too widely separated. They should be introduced, and cultivate an intimate acquaintance, which in time will be sure to ripen into real friendship, and finally, the school may become the beginning of business life, not a mere isolated factor.

if it were able, and when we tell prospective students and the public about it, we have the ideal in our mind, and not the real. The result is dissatisfaction among patrons, the most direful seal of death that could be stamped on a school; for when a student pays his tuition and is ushered into the cold, chalk-dusty and in some cases, dismal study hall, and is given in charge of a tired sort of a teacher, who is too busy to give him

TOO OLD!

A number of Business College papers come to our office, and we enjoy their perusal very much, yet there is a great amount of their matter which is stereotyped and monotonous. We refer especially to the opinions of prominent people regarding the efficacy of a Business Education. Mr. Garfield's memorable address on this theme has been quoted until the public shun it, and papers containing parts or the whole of it. Mrs. Stowe's advice is only of a common-place sort, but has been told by the whole round of school advertising sheets. Horace Greeley was excellent authority, but people are tired of his little verse about business education and his imaginary son. Leonard Swett is known in more places than Chicago but his time-worn paragraph is nothing wonderful.

If principals would think out some practical advantages of such a training as their schools impart and state them in a concise, business-like way, it would be fully as convincing and would give the impression that those estimable people to whom reference is made have not catalogued all the reasons which exist for obtaining a business education.

Prof. W. H. Duff, the skilled veteran penman of Pittsburgh, Pa.,
Furnished the above pretty design.

Principals of Commercial Schools should make it a point to personally investigate the abilities of a man before engaging him to teach in their institutions. Too often superficial qualifications pass for genuine business and teaching ability.

Principals, furnish what you invariably more than passing attention, and any eccentricity of his raiment meets with the illy suppressed sneers of boisterous-looking students, he does not retain his exalted idea of the commercial school, and is discouraged, undervalues the real merits of the school; concludes he has been grossly swindled

OUR CARD BASKET.

We give on the 6th page the first of a series of collections of autograph and business card cuts. In the center we have the attractive envelope heading of our friend, E. J. Kuehl, Stratford, Ont. The original was designed and executed in pen and ink work. It affords suggestive ideas to those who wish to prepare similar work.

Above it we have a neat little design from the pen of Prof. C. E. McKee, Columbus, O.

Farley's signature will afford healthful practice in writing, as will that of Prof. Collins. Faust's name should be practiced with the automatic leading pen.

SAMPLE COPIES.

This issue will reach a number of penmen and others who have not, as yet, subscribed for it and in order to induce them to become members of our family AT ONCE, we continue our exceedingly liberal premium offer of a copy of the famed work, A Series of Lessons in Plain Writing, with a year's subscription to the HERALD, for one dollar.

Do you not find valuable features in this number? Some marked improvements are now in course of preparation and, candidly, you cannot do yourself justice and do without future issues. Let us hear from you!

EXPIRATIONS.

If this item is marked your subscription expires with this issue, and unless your renewal is prompt, you will miss the best issue yet produced—the next one!

Above we present some handsome combinations, written by pupils of Prof. BIKER, Wooster, Ohio.

ably advertise the best talent you can hire. It will pay you to make your institution as good in reality as it is represented in your circular.

How easy it is to sit down and write up an attractive advertisement for our school! We all have superb ideals of what we would like to make and vows that no one else shall take the same step through his influence.

Better plan—make your school correspond with your ideal before advertising the ideal.

How are you pleased with the May issue?

FOUR FINE WRITERS.

Among the students of the Ohio Business University of this city, we have found, to our gratification, at least four who especially excel in penmanship, the work of almost any one of whom would do proud honor to many professional teachers with whose skill we are acquainted.

In the preparatory business department, for instance, over in a secluded section sits young P. J. Seiberth, a lad of fifteen, who uses the oblique holder dexterously, and is an industrious fellow, bound for the top in penmanship circles. Of course he is one of the HERALD's large family and admires the paper very much.

are deserving of especial mention, but as the HERALD is not a local paper, we cannot give the space.

Such penmanship items as are deserving of a place in our Business College department are earnestly solicited from penmen in schools where the HERALD circulates. Encourage your pupils, boys, by spreading the intelligence of their progress before thousands of other workers in all parts of the continent.

READING THE PAPERS.

In a lengthy review of the various commendable features of the Green Bay, Wis., Business College, a local

A crisp and newsy sheet is the School Visitor, Madison, Wis. We always like to see it among our morning mail. Prof. J. C. Proctor, associate editor, is a skilled penman.

The Business Educator, edited and published by Johnson, Perrin & Osborn, Buffalo, N. Y., is a spicy and well edited journal, and we regret that its visits are so far apart. It is a quarterly. Many "spicy items" are contained in the April number.

The Practical Educator, by Armstrong & Wesco, Portland, Ore., is a truly valuable sheet and contains some of the finest specimens of orna-

Kas., sends us its second number. We like it and predict that the penmen will all do likewise, when they make its acquaintance.

A CHIROGRAPHIC ENTERPRISE.

The HERALD has in preparation one of the finest pen-art volumes ever conceived, "Our Profession and its Representatives." The work will be on a unique plan and will be duly announced later. Any penman desiring to be represented in it may have a special descriptive circular by addressing

W. D. SOWALTER,

Woonsocket, R.I.
May 10, 1887

Mr. J. P. Stowell,
Dear Sir.—Having been a student in your institution the past ten months, it gives me pleasure to be able to testify to its merits.

The Bryant and Stratton Business College affords superior advantages to students who wish to be thoroughly prepared for any department of business.

Yours truly,
J. P. Byrne,
Class of '87.

The above is a PHOTO-ENGRAVING of RAPID WRITING, originally written by our friend, Mr. J. P. Byrne, Woonsocket, R. I.

Passing up-stairs we find Mr. C. W. Treat dashing off a style of writing which stamps him as a penman, and one of striking talent and skill. We hope to present him and some of the beautiful forms which flow from his pen to our family in a more formal manner at an early date.

Miss Alva Waltz, already presented to our friends through the weekly HERALD, is one of the finest lady writers in the country, and has decided art talent. With a little more practice, her work will closely resemble that of Miss Nintin.

Young Mr. C. H. Gerhan writes a hand that partakes of the pumkinick flavor, and does him much credit. There are others, in the school, who paper of that city, refers to our accomplished friend, Prof. E. F. Quintal, in a highly complimentary manner.

The Educational Journal Clinton, Iowa, contains an interesting sketch and a striking portrait of the renowned business educator, Prof. Cornelius Bayless, Dubuque, Iowa. The last number will be appreciated and preserved by hundreds for this one feature, but aside from this it is full of good things, among which may be found a notice of the HERALD.

The York Business College, York, Neb., is endorsed in strong terms by the press of that city. It is a deserving institution.

mental pen-work we have ever seen.

The Allentown, Pa., Commercial College publishes a commendable and readable periodical. Prof. Dorney assists with the editorial shears.

The Western Penman is surely one of the most attractive periodicals in its line in the matter of cut. Three very handsome portraits adorn the last number.

Gaskell's Magazine is one of our favorite periodicals. We always rejoice to grasp its thoughts as served up by the versatile Scudbaro.

The Writing Master, Winfield,

TEN NIGHTS IN A SCHOOL ROOM.

In our next issue, we expect to begin a series of ten editorial articles under the above caption, drawing from our own actual experience before the black-board for the methods and facts embodied, and from a turbulent imagination for the literary embellishment. We shall aim to make them as novel and valuable as possible and we think our reader will find something to quicken the teaching pulses in every article.

Notice Byrne's letter on this page. It is not hand engraved, but represents photo-reproduced writing.

Lesson in Penmanship.

BY F. D. GORSLINE.

Let the student seat himself, in front position, at a table of convenient height, which must vary according to the height of a person. Place the chair well back from the table, and sit as far back in it as possible. Place the feet firmly on the floor, the left a little in advance of the right, so that the body will be self-supporting. Never pile the feet up, for this throws the balancing of the body on the arms. Incline the body, without curving the back or bending the neck, until the eyes are brought at a distance from the paper where the sight is best, usually about fourteen inches distant with natural sight. Now place the forearms on the table in front of you so that they form a right angle, or a square corner, with the point of the elbows just projecting over the edge of the table. Arrange the paper in line with the right arm. The weight of this arm should rest lightly on the muscle in front of the elbow, and that of the hand on the nails of the third and fourth fingers. The pen is held, lightly, with the thumb and first and second fingers, crossing the second finger at the roots of the nail. The forefinger is placed on top of the holder about one and a fourth inches from the point of the pen in the medium sized hand, and the end of the thumb is placed against the side of holder, opposite the first joint in the forefinger. The thumb should be in line with the arm, and the wrist clear the paper by at least half an inch. The first and second fingers should be curved enough to admit of a free upward and downward movement of the pen. The upper part of the holder may drop just below the knuckle and stand at an angle to the paper of about forty-five degrees. Without doubt the best movement used in writing is a combination of the muscular, or forearm, and finger, yet some good business writers use nothing but muscular. In learning, it is best to discard the finger movement entirely until you have obtained a good knowledge and use of the muscular. The muscular movement consists in moving the pen by means of the forearm; in fact the whole arm, with a rest on the muscle near the elbow, using the fingers merely to hold the pen. The arm should not slide on the desk, but roll on the muscle, and the ends of the third and fourth fingers should go through the same motion as that of the point of the pen, that is, if the nails of the third and fourth fingers were inked, they should produce the same letter as that formed by the pen. Finger movement may be detected by observing the working of the thumb joint. You may now assume the position as directed, and practice the oval exercise for at least half an hour. The motion may be regulated by counting one for the downward movement and two for the upward. You may next practice the small and capital letter exercises as presented, using perfect freedom of movement in every stroke. At least ten minutes of every hour's work for the next two weeks should be spent in practicing the oval exercise, both with and without shades. It is better practice than a letter, as your attention will not be so absorbed in its form as to forget the movement. Never commence a lesson without the full determination of sticking to it until something is accomplished, and never leave a copy until you can see some improvement.

movement may be detected by observing the working of the thumb joint. You may now assume the position as directed, and practice the oval exercise for at least half an hour. The motion may be regulated by counting one for the downward movement and two for the upward. You may next practice the small and capital letter exercises as presented, using perfect freedom of movement in every stroke. At least ten minutes of every hour's work for the next two weeks should be spent in practicing the oval exercise, both with and without shades. It is better practice than a letter, as your attention will not be so absorbed in its form as to forget the movement. Never commence a lesson without the full determination of sticking to it until something is accomplished, and never leave a copy until you can see some improvement.

This outline lesson in writing we hope will be of service to some one, and inspire him to decide, at least in favor of a good BUSINESS HANDWRITING.

WE INVITE DISCUSSION

On the subject of teaching writing. Some intensely business-like penman may decide us for extending such an invitation; arguing that the subject is worn threadbare. Perhaps; and in a greater degree all the themes touching on human welfare are worn threadbare, but they still agitate the minds of thinkers. While the teaching of business writing, and the results of such teaching, remain so fearfully clouded in error, and so extremely unsatisfactory, we feel that methods need reaping.

We would like to give the ideas and methods of a dozen practical teachers on this theme at an early day. Compose your ideas into a thousand "ems," friends, and come on to the HERALD's composing rooms with them. It's for the general good.

J. F. FISH,

Whose pen-work may be procured at very fair rates by all of our readers, is one of America's Star Penmen, and is one of the most reliable and prompt of the business men with whom we have to do.

Those of our readers desiring excellent scrap-book specimens, or artistic card-work, should invest all the spare nickels in their possession in securing this talented pen-wielder to do the work. Prof. Fish holds a very responsible teaching position in our city, and is very successful in his vocation.

"THE GRAND OLD MAN."

Of our profession, Principal Robert C. Spencer, of Milwaukee, Wis., is in hearty sympathy with the HERALD's mission, and wishes it unlimited success. In fact, the sages of penmanistic fame are fast rallying to the aid of the HERALD, recognizing that it is on the "Inside Track." A few are still outside the widening circle. "The latch-string" awaits your touch. Admission fee 60 cents.

Card-Basket of Business Card and Envelope Heads.

GENERALITIES.

One of the most worthy of our young business writers is Mr. Jesse Overlock, Rockport, Me.

E. L. Brown, of the above city, is another of Maine's good penmen.

Thos. Mansell of Chester, Va., is a good practical penman, and does good engraving.

A photo of a unique pen-drawing is in our hands, the work of the Iowa pen-artist, Prof. C. E. Jones, of Tabor.

The Writing Teacher, Richmond, Va., has met with some financial embarrassment and, for a time, is suspended. Editor Williamson has our best wishes for renewed prosperity.

R. S. Bonsall, Chicago, is a skilled copper plate engraver. Some work done for us recently is excellent. A comprehensive and copiously illustrated lesson on practical writing, from this master of his calling, will appear in an early issue.

Miss Nintin's copy for her lesson proved too pale for photo-reproduction, consequently is delayed.

Prof. S. E. Bartow, late Professor of plain and ornamental penmanship in the Ohio Business University, of this city, has gone to Buffalo, to accept a position in the American Business College, a new, incorporated school, under the direction of the business men of that city. Mr. Bartow is a special friend of ours, and has our hearty wishes for a brilliant success in the new field.

The editor of the HERALD will devote a part of his time to the discharge of the duties of Prof. Bartow's vacant place.

We are indebted to Prin. R. C. Spencer, Milwaukee, Wis., for a copy of the proceedings of the late B. E. A. of A., held in the rooms of his institution last summer. It makes an excellent valuable volume.

Mr. G. S. Ferguson, Galesburg, Kan., is the possessor of a marked degree of pen-skill in the automatic line.

Bergman's Pen-Guide is an ingenious aid to correct pen holding. We have a few for sale at the cash.

Our esteemed friend, J. M. Lantz, Emmitsburg, Md., is a fine penman and a fine young man. We commend those who wish lessons by mail to this successful young teacher.

SCARBORO'S ENTERPRISE.

Sometimes, as in the HERALD's case, it is the part of wisdom to return to the old order of things, to travel the old road to the assured destination of success.

Such are Brother Scarboro's views. With the May issue the MAGAZINE is changed back to the paper out of which it grew—THE PENMAN'S GAZETTE. Many friends of the old periodical will rejoice in its second birth; while many of us will miss the MAGAZINE sadly. We are content, however, no matter in what form they appear, as long as Scarboro's flashes of wit greet us monthly.

